Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.
At Shanghai, terror-stricken natives flee the Chapei district to seek safety in the International Settlement as new hostilities break out between opposing armies. These pictures, Wirephotoed from San Francisco, were flown there by the Pan-American Clipper.

These Chinese soldiers, their bodies lying in grotesque heaps, were shot down by Japanese machine gunners in bitter fighting that preceded the capture of Tientsin by Japanese troops. Black specks seen on the bodies are flies. Sanitation squads roamed the city after fireing ceased, spraying lime on the streets.

Shanghai in Flames; U.S. Protests Shelling

Court Foes' Defeat Is Asked by Guffey

'Ingratitude' Charged to Wheeler, O'Mahoney and Burke.

By Robert C. Albright.

While Postmaster General Farley last night scoffed at claims of a Democratic rift, Senator Joseph F. Guffey, of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, virtually called for political scalps of Democratic court plan opponents.

Both Farley and Guffey spoke on the eve of adjournment of one of the bitterest sessions of Congress ever held, an adjournment which was scheduled to come today with final action on the Wagner housing bill and the third deficiency appropriation bill.

In a Nation-wide radio address, Guffey leveled charges of "ingratitude" and "disloyalty" at Senators Wheeler, of Montana; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Burke, of Nebraska. He predicted "defeat" in 1946 for the latter two, and said Wheeler will have "plenty to do" in Montana, without aiding his fellow opponents.

Speaks Before Farley.

Guffey spoke just 30 minutes after Chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee told an Indianapolis Young Democratic gathering that charges of political reprisals and a Democratic split are "scarecrows" and "phantoms." Farley said "hostile sources" are promoting "the talk of a rift in the Democratic Party, of a rebellion in our ranks and disloyalty in our councils."

The Pennsylvania Senator, who, as chairman of the Democratic senatorial committee is charged with promoting the campaigns of Democratic Senators, let fly at senatorial court-plan opponents a few hours after he had talked with both President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner.

Guffey before going on the air had denied to reporters general reports of a break between Garner and the President. He said he was authorized to say both were "on the friendliest of terms."

"Dislikes Ingrates."

"I dislike ingrates and ingratitude," he said. "I believe that the 27,000,000 who voted for Mr. Roosevelt likewise dislike ingrates and ingratitude and that they will bury in the oblivion of defeat those now public men who come within these classifications."

Guffey talked under sponsorship of the Pennsylvania State Democratic Committee, and Farley's speech was released by the Democratic National Committee here.

In the same speech, Guffey lashed out at Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and the Supreme Court majority as well as Democratic court plan opponents.

He said Hughes has "provided the issue for tomorrow" by saying in a recent speech to Amherst College alumni that "the ruthlessness of a temporary majority, if unchecked, will eventually lead to the entire

Roosevelt Names Justin Miller to Appellate Bench

Harris & Ewing.
JUSTIN MILLER.

Justin Miller, member of the Board of Tax Appeals and a former special assistant to the Attorney General, was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt to succeed the late Justice Josiah A. Van Orsdel as an associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District.

The announcement was somewhat of a surprise. Miller had not been previously mentioned as a prospect for the post.

He came to Washington in 1934 to take the Justice Department assignment, with a wide reputation as an anti-crime crusader.

From 1930 to 1934, Miller had been dean of the law school at Duke University. He also served as law school dean at the University of Southern California from 1927 to 1930. His other university connections included the universities of Oregon, Minnesota, Stanford and California.

Last January Miller became a

Congress Enacts Bills to Improve Capital Airport

The Copeland-May bills to improve Washington Airport were approved last night by the House. The Senate had passed the bill.

The conference report on the improvement of Washington Airport authorizes the lease of Military road to the terminal for a period of 25 years. The compromise measure provides that $25,000 shall be paid by the terminal company to Arlington County for construction of a substitute highway; the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to lease 53 acres of the experimental farm to the terminal company at a dollar a year, and Boundary Channel lagoon may be leased to the airport at $1 a year.

Labor Chiefs Lash Junking Of Wage Bill

By Russell Smith

Organized labor leaders sank their deep-seated differences temporarily yesterday in joint denunciation of what John L. Lewis termed "sabotage" of wages-hours legislation in the House Rules Committee and the attempted Democratic caucus Thursday.

Lewis' arch-rival in the struggle for leadership of American labor, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said that "apparently the Rules Committee. . . . is stifling and defeating legislation."

Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, said "responsibility must rest directly upon the individuals who have defied their party, repudiated their pledges and condemned workers and employers alike to a continuation of intolerable and inhuman conditions."

Green and Hillman insisted Congress should remain in session until it enacts wages-hours legislation. Lewis accepted the defeat of the bill's supporters Thursday as conclusive.

Warns Party Leaders.

Political implications were read by many into Lewis' words. He warned the leaders of the Democratic Party "either to restore sufficient discipline to permit Government to function under their guidance, or to confess that their party is not the vehicle by which the people of the country may progress to a solution of their pressing social problems."

A similar note was translated by some into his inclusion of farmers in this statement:

"The chaos of unchecked private power in industry will inevitably culminate in new and probably greater business depression unless the workers and the farmers of the Nation are given legal protection of their basic rights."

Another interpretation placed upon his proposal for "sufficient party discipline," was that it represented insistence upon punishment of members he regards as responsible for failure of the legislation.

"Fails in Pledges."

"Sabotage of the Democratic Party by a small group of its more conservative members, which came to a head in the House Rules Committee and in the caucus of last (Thursday) evening, shows that Democratic leadership is unable to carry out the pledges made in the name of their party during the 1936 campaign," Lewis said.

"Positive Governmental action is necessary if we are to correct basic

Shanghai War 'Hell on Earth,' Says District Woman Refugee

Bombs Fell Everywhere, Evacuation Vessel Nearly Swamped.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, P. I., Aug. 20.—"Shanghai is hell on earth."

Mrs. R. M. O'Toole, of Washington, so described the flaming Chinese city as she left the refugee-laden liner President Jefferson today at Manila.

"Bombs fell everywhere in the French Concession, where we lived," said Mrs. O'Toole, wife of a Marine warrant officer.

"Shrapnel fell indiscriminately, killing and wounding many people. Everyone was terrified.

"On the trip by tender to Woosung, where we boarded the Jefferson, the heavily loaded tender tipped forward twice as though it were going down in the heavy seas.

"It was horrible."

"Some of the women, a few of them expectant mothers, swooned. Some of us thought it might be preferable to stay in Shanghai rather than risk our lives trying to reach the refugee ship.

Lisbon's Break With Czechs Is Upheld in Press

Portuguese Leaders United in Row; Praha's Envoy Remains at Post.

By the Associated Press.

The Czech Minister to Lisbon, however, remained at his post.

All publications here strongly supported the government's move, attributed officially to Czechoslovakian reluctance to permit the filling of a large Portuguese order for machine guns.

An official communique here has blamed "third-party pressure" for the failure of the order of munitions from Czechoslovakia.

2 Quakes Rock Manila, Terrify War Refugees

Buildings Sway, Fires Rage; Quezon Declares State of Emergency.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Aug 20.—Twin earthquakes—Manila's worst in 40 years—converted this haven of safety into a darkened city of terror tonight for the first American refugees from embattled Shanghai.

City lights, snuffed out by the first shocks, were restored to reveal streets strewn with broken masonry and glass. Hospitals treated many injured, but no deaths were reported.

[President Manuel Quezon declared a state of emergency throughout Manila, the United Press reported.—Editor's Note.]

Residents fled in terror from their homes. Fires broke out in many places, but few proved serious.

Offices Here Halt Work in Record Heat

Thousands Sent Home as Mercury Soars to 97 Peak.

Two More Prostrated; Early Relief Held Unlikely.

Washington continued to swelter in the worst heat wave of the summer as the mercury yesterday recorded the hottest day of the year, reaching 97 degrees at 4:10 p. m.

Two heat prostrations were reported and thousands of Government workers were sent home early as the Weather Bureau predicted little possibility of relief.

Yesterday's heat prostrations were Mrs. Bess Crawford, 40, of 335 W street northeast, overcome at her home, and Herbert Bobo, 50, of 235 Morgan street northeast, who came to Casualty Hospital for treatment.

Early closing was ordered for practically all divisions of the Treasury Department, the General Accounting Office and the District Building. Employes of the Bureau of Public Roads, 515 Fourteenth street northwest, were not released early, but received 12 gallons of lemonade from sympathetic employes of a restaurant on the ground floor of the building.

Mercury Rises All Day.

Climbing from a low of 76 degrees at 6 a. m. yesterday morning, the mercury had reached 83 by 9:30 and continued upward in the afternoon.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported, a cool spell that pushed the mercury down into the 50's yesterday in the Dakotas had moved eastward in the wake of rains that brought some relief to Midwestern city dwellers and farmers.

In the East, however, temperatures remained high despite heavy thundershowers in some sections. Mugginess added to discomfort.

Forecasters said the rainfall in Iowa, totaling six inches, was of great benefit to corn crops.

Shot Kills Sailor, Damages Cruiser

Japanese Ship Nearby Believed Responsible; 18 Wounded.

An Editorial—Page 8.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Aug. 21.—Death dropped out of the sky last night and landed among a group of 40 American sailors peacefully watching a movie on the well-deck of the United States cruiser Augusta—and today the incident had plunged the unofficial Shanghai war into its gravest international complications since hostilities broke out a week ago.

One sailor—Frederick J. Falgout, of Raceland, La.—was killed when a shred of splintered steel pierced his heart; and 18 others were wounded by bits of the exploding shell.

Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, supreme American authority in these waters, immediately started an investigation to determine whether—as was believed—the shell was fired from a Japanese warship anchored a few hundred yards from the Augusta.

Yarnell reprimanded both Japan and China after consultation with the American consul general, Clarence E. Gauss.

Yarnell announced he had warned both Chinese and Japanese authorities against shellfire over American and foreign warships.

"I asked them especially to refrain from firing over the Augusta," the admiral said.

Augusta Damaged.

The Augusta, flagship of the Asiatic fleet, was damaged and it was believed American authorities may demand a full investigation.

The shell that struck the Augusta was tentatively established as an antiaircraft shell. At the time a Japanese warship anchored less than a quarter of a mile from the Augusta was firing at Chinese airplanes raiding the Japanese third battle fleet.

The shelling followed 24 hours of tension between the United States, British and other foreign naval commanders and the Japanese and Chinese.

Cites International Law.

The British and United States commanders had refused to limit the movements of their ships in response to a Japanese demand, and they had rejected a Chinese demand they force the Japanese warships to withdraw from the battle area or "accept the consequences."

Admiral Yarnell notified Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, commanding the Japanese forces, that international law permits free movement of United States warships on the Whangpoo River and that the United States armed vessels will move where and when their commanders find it necessary.

American and British authorities said emphatically they would continue to protect or remove their citizens from the bomb-torn city of 3,500,000 people, and that they would use whatever methods were necessary to get them out.

Fires Spread; Chinese Tanks, Planes Smash at Foe's Lines.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Aug. 21. A fourth of Shanghai's densely populated area was set ablaze by bombs and shells last night in the fiercest bomb and artillery duel of the eight-day Shanghai war.

The fires raged furiously into the night with no effort to check them. The largest were along the waterfront of Pootung, industrial area across the Whangpoo from Shanghai's International Settlement, where Chinese airmen bombed Japanese properties, and in Hongkew, the Japanese section of the city.

American losses were believed heavy in the fires roaring through the industrial districts on both banks of the Whangpoo. Plants of the Sherwin-Williams Paint Co. and the Simmons Mattress Co. were reported burned. In or close to the burning Pootung district are big storage plants of the American Standard-Vacuum and Texas Oil companies, but their fate was not known.

Japanese Factory Burned.

Japanese properties, the targets of the Chinese airmen and gunners, suffered most heavily. The Nanyang tobacco factory in Hongkew, largest of its kind in China, was a roaring furnace.

[Using tanks and bombing planes, Chinese troops tried to smash through Japanese lines in the northern Hongkew section, the United Press reported. Chinese said hundreds of their crack Central Government troops had poured into Hongkew. Japanese said at least 90,000 Chinese troops were concentrated in the area.—Editor's note.]

Tokyo Premier Expects Long Chinese War; Shanghai's Defender Predicts Early Victory

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 20.—Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye predicted today the Sino-Japanese conflict would be of long duration and that there would be no settlement until Japan had punished the Chinese army.

He furthermore barred foreign intervention in the undeclared war, asserting peace negotiations must be conducted by China and Japan alone.

The government's ultimate aim is to effect amicable relations between China and Japan after chastising the Chinese militarists, he asserted.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Aug. 20.—Gen. Chang Chi-Chung, commander in chief of the Chinese armies defending Shanghai, said tonight that the Sino-Japanese conflict would end soon with a smashing victory for China.

He added that if a general nation-wide war should break out, time would be on the side of the Chinese, who were now prepared to continue the struggle for years.

Gen. Chang, veteran of the 1932 Shanghai war, appeared confident that the Japanese forces would shortly be driven back.

Conferees Agree on Slum Clearance Bill; Adjournment Assured Today

Views of House Dominate in Compromises

By Sidney Olson.

Ten tired men, yawning and stretching, dragged themselves wearily out of the office of the Senate secretary late last night with word of a complete House-Senate agreement on the Wagner-Steagall low-cost housing bill—the last barrier to adjournment.

The five Senators and five Representatives, after fighting over the many controversial sections for 11½ hours, announced a long series of compromises that leaned heavily toward the House version of the bill.

As stipulated in the House version, the bill's authorization for bond issues was set at $500,000,000, in contrast to the original Senate provision of $700,000,000.

Single Administrator.

The United States Housing Authority, to be created permanently as a division of the Interior Department, will be headed by a single $10,000-a-year administrator. The Senate had provided a three-man board.

A limitation of $5,000 per average family-dwelling unit, or $1,250 per room in four-room units, was established for cities of 500,000 population or more. For cities of less population, the cost was set at $4,000, or $1,000 per room in four-room units.

Where the Senate had provided for outright loans to housing agencies, up to the full 100 per cent, with the House provision set at 85 per cent, a compromise was struck at 90 per cent.

On the local portion of the annual subsidies, or annual local contributions toward a project's cost and upkeep, the figure of 20 per cent was established. The Senate had put this at 5 per cent and the House had set it at 25 per cent.

State Maximum 15 Per Cent.

The Senate bill had fixed 20 per cent of the total funds as the maximum to go into any one State, while the House had established 10 per cent as the maximum. In the compromise of last night, 15 per cent was agreed on.

The time for re-examination of projects by the Housing Authority, set by the Senate at 20 years, and every ten years thereafter, was moved over to the House figure of initial resurvey after ten years and re-examination every five years thereafter.

Authority Remains 60 Years.

The bill's authority remained at 60 years, the original period agreed on by both houses.

The civil service provisions, inserted by the Senate and jerked therefrom by the House, were revamped in this fashion: attorneys, experts and officers were exempted from the civil service, along with all other employes making more than $1,980 a year.

The matter of Senate confirmation of all employes making $4,000 or more yearly, struck down by the House bill, was compromised by moving this figure up to $7,500.

D. C. Aid Provided.

The House amendment putting the District's Alley Dwelling Authority under the act to the extent of making available to it Presidentially-approved funds appropriated for this bill, was kept.

The Senate conferees agreed to "Standards," a lengthy section in the bill defining the considerations to guide the Authority in its decisions. The House had struck this from the bill.

Quick approval is expected in both houses today for the compromises. Only an undreamed-of Senate filibuster could prevent the measure's reaching the White House before adjournment tonight.

Hospital Discloses Birth of 6-Lb. Boy After Mother Dies

Philadelphia, Aug. 20 (AP).—The birth of a 6-pound baby boy, delivered through a Caesarean operation a few moments after the mother died in St. Joseph's Hospital, July 5, was reported by the hospital today.

Physicians said they had purposely kept the successful birth a secret until they were positive the baby would live.

The mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Sirlauli, died of spinal meningitis. Dr. James Carroll, a staff obstetrician, removed the baby, a month and a half premature. The father, Alfred Sirlauli, is a laborer.

Mattern Joins Hunt For Soviet Airmen

Barrow, Alaska, Aug. 20 (AP).—Eager to repay his own rescue four years ago, Jimmie Mattern soared out of Fairbanks toward the Arctic Coast today to take up the week-old search for six lost Russian transpolar fliers.

Meanwhile, in a great flying boat, Sir George Hubert Wilkins, British explorer, and four fliers raced across northwestern Canada to establish a rescue base near the Alaska border.

Labor Board Orders United Press Election

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ordered a Nation-wide election within 30 days among editorial employes of the United Press Association, including those of the City News Service of Los Angeles, Inc., to determine whether they desire to be represented by the American Newspaper Guild in collective bargaining.

Voting will be under the direction of Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, regional director of the board at New York.

All editorial employes, excluding bureau managers of bureaus of more than one man, are eligible to vote, the board said.

Politics and People

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

UNLESS some unforeseen development occurs, Congress will adjourn today the session it commenced last January 3. A session of Congress, which will, without doubt, become memorable and even historic comes to as colorless and drab an end as any in the memory of man now living. Mentally and physically exhausted, its members are without the heart to fight about anything—not even to filibuster to force passage of desired legislation.

This is subject to one qualification, and that is that political anger may flame in the Senate as a result of the insulting and unprecedented speech made last night by Senator Joseph F. Guffey.

If the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress does go down in history, it will not be because of its accomplishments. It will be because of the things it did not do, chiefly its crushing and—to the White House—humiliating rejection of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization program. That of course is the highlight of the session.

But this session of Congress will be memorable for another reason, namely, the utter failure of the Democratic Party to redeem the major pledges on which it won its unprecedented and overwhelming victory of last November. With 76 of the 96 members of the Senate and 331 of the 435 members of the House, the Democratic Party and President Roosevelt, ten months after that election, reveal themselves to the country unable or unwilling to fulfill the pledge which Mr. Roosevelt made to the country at Madison Square Garden, on November 1, last in these words:

"Of course, we will continue to seek to improve working conditions for the workers of America—to reduce hours over-long, to increase wages that spell starvation, and end the labor of children, to wipe out sweatshops. Of course, we will continue every effort to end monopoly in business, to support collective bargaining, to stop unfair competition, to abolish dishonorable trade practices. For all these we have only just begun to fight."

You may not have agreed with the wisdom and feasibility of that promised action. You may disagree with methods of attaining the promised end. But you cannot deny that Mr. Roosevelt, in terms so simple as to be understood by a child, promised action placing a ceiling on hours of labor and a floor under wages and abolishing child labor. For the present we pass by his promises to end monopoly—about which he has done nothing except to encourage monopolistic practices by signing a bill containing a price-fixing provision.

It cannot be denied that millions of men and women in this country fully sympathize with the President's professed objectives to wipe out sweatshop conditions and starvation wages in those industries which come within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government. Many of those men and women voted for the President because of that promise.

Has that promise been fulfilled? It has not been. True, Mr. Roosevelt submitted a wages and hours bill to Congress and it is the House Rules Committee which has thwarted action. But Mr. Roosevelt cannot escape responsibility on that plea. Had he submitted his wages and hours bill early in the session, it would have been impossible for the Rules Committee or any other small minority to block action.

Instead of laying before Congress his proposals for wages and hours last January when Congress convened or even in February or March, the President waited until June to submit his program. In the meanwhile, he split his party into warring factions by proposing the Court reorganization bill, for which he had no mandate from the people and which he did not even mention to them during his campaign.

With nerves jangling and tempers frayed, as a result of the bitterness of the futile and unnecessary Court battle, and in the sweltering heat of Washington's summer, Congress was asked to undertake to legislate a wages and hours bill. It was inevitable that the legislative machinery under such circumstances would jam some place along the line and that has happened.

Thus Mr. Roosevelt must accept the major part of the responsibility for the present debacle over the wages and hours bill, not only because he is the leader of the party, but because he delayed five months in submitting his program. Due to the President's own actions, the Democratic Party for the present has been reduced to an impotent and ineffectual instrument for carrying out the will of the people as clearly expressed last November.

"To the leaders of the Democratic Party," asserted John L. Lewis yesterday, evidently with Mr. Roosevelt in mind, "it presents the challenge either to restore sufficient party discipline to permit government to function under their guidance, or to confess that their party is not the vehicle by which the people of the country may progress to a solution of their pressing social problems."

For those who believe in democracy; those who believe that the covenant which political parties make with the people should be kept, there is no answer to Mr. Lewis' statement. He points his finger at a crucial development in American life.

* * *

Certainly Mr. Roosevelt can take no pride in the accomplishments of the first session of Congress in his second term. He must realize that an impasse has developed between the executive and the legislative branches of government. Whether that impasse continues, depends on what Mr. Roosevelt proposes to do. He can undertake to wield a big stick, assume the role of a demanding dictator and undertake to seek revenge on all who oppose him; or he may examine his own conscience, admit to himself that he has been, at least partly, at fault and seek to be more reasonable in order to strike a working balance with Congress.

If he chooses to let the shadow of the dead Supreme Court bill become a cloud over all his program and pursues the course pointed out last night by Senator Guffey—an arrogant and impudent course for Pennsylvania's Democratic boss to tell the people of Nebraska and Wyoming how to vote—then, Mr. Roosevelt will have battles galore on his hands. And he will run the risk of sacrificing much that he might otherwise accomplish to satisfy his personal and political vanity.

Primarily the people of this country are not greatly concerned about Mr. Roosevelt's personal ambitions and aspirations or his place in history. Entertaining as bloody political battles may at times become, the people of this country want results. Instead they are getting a circus.

'Rumors of Rotteness' in Communication Body Impel Wheeler to Warn of Inquiry.

"RUMORS OF ROTTENNESS and corruption" in the Communications Commission stirred Chairman Wheeler, of Montana, and the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee to the prediction yesterday there will be an investigation of that agency unless it is revised from within.

Wheeler's statement was made when his committee ended a hearing into the fitness of T. A. M. Craven, the commission's chief engineer, who has been nominated by President Roosevelt to membership on the commission. Wheeler said he intended no reflection on Craven by his statement. The nomination was approved by the committee.

Craven told the committee he divested himself of all interest in commercial radio projects before becoming commission engineer. Wheeler had received a telegram from J. R. Kiernan, of New York City, stating that Craven still held an interest in certain broadcasting companies.

"There has been so much talk of corruption and rottenness in the Communications Commission," Wheeler said, "that I am skeptical of all these appointments. There are reports of influence by politicians and others. Members of Congress are well fed up on what is going on down there.

"Unless these rumors of rottenness and corruption are shown up to be false, something is going to be done about it up here. The FCC has been used as a political football by former Administrations and by certain people in this one. This must be stopped or there will be disclosures in an investigation."

Last Hurdles Taken in Rush To End Session

Third Deficiency Measure Raises Spending Total to $9,500,000,000.

By Robert C. Albright.

A $9,400,000,000 session of Congress, replete with Administration court, farm and labor failures and minor successes, was on the brink of adjournment last night, but prepared for an anticlimactic finish today.

Last-minute legislation chaff was whirled through at amazing speed before the machinery clogged on one controversial measure. It was the Wagner slum-clearance bill, in the thick of a Senate and House conference fight until agreement was reached late last night.

The Senate appeared undetermined whether to quit or stick it out far into the night. Then Speaker Bankhead and Senate Leader Barkley talked it over and decided to adjourn today. The Senate recessed, but the House adopted a resolution for sine die adjournment today, then sat late on private bills and non-controversial measures.

Before the Senate cleared its decks in a brisk afternoon workout, it added a new member, Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves, of Alabama. Appointed by her husband, Gov. Graves, to the seat vacated Thursday by the former Senator and new Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, Mrs. Graves was administered the oath by Vice President Garner.

Rushes Big Spending Bill.

Then the Senate rushed to passage the $140,000,000 third deficiency bill, increased $40,000,000 above House figures. It was the last of the appropriation bills, and it boosted the session's spending record to more than a billion in excess of last session's record, exclusive of the bonus outlay.

As a rider on the last deficiency bill, the Senate added an amendment making $65,000,000 in customs receipts available for subsidies on cotton crops to farmers who cooperate in next year's crop adjustment program.

This was part of a "gentleman's agreement" with the President to approve price-pegging crop loans and subsidies if Congress agreed to give crop control legislation first consideration next session.

This agreemnt was sealed yesterday, when the House, over Republican opposition, adopted and sent to the White House a resolution pledging prior consideration of the farm measure. The Se ate adopted the resolution last week.

Other Measures Cleared.

Last-minute action on other measures cluttering the path to adjournment follows:

The House approved Senate amendments to the $100,000,000 tax loophole plugging bill and sent it to the President for approval.

The House accepted the conference report on the sugar marketing bill, and sent it to the White House. The bill carries restrictions on refined sugar imports from Hawaii and Puerto Rico until 1940. The President, opposed to any restrictions, might veto it.

The Senate completed Congressional action on the $34,177,000 Whittington-Copeland flood control bill, and sent it to the White House. The Senate adopted a conference report on the legislation providing flood control aid in the Ohio River Valley and for Memphis.

Legislation on tap for today included the hoped-for conference agreement on the much-revised housing bill, and House action on an unemployment census bill previously passed by the Senate. The House Labor Committee has reported the jobless census bill, modified to provide for voluntary unemployment registration.

Child Labor Bill Seems Doomed.

Apparently doomed was the Wheeler-Johnson child labor bill approved Thursday by the Senate, barring interstate commerce in goods produced by child labor under 16 (18 in hazardous industries). The House committee had rejected the bill as an amendment to the pigeon-holed wages and hours measure and was unlikely to approve it separately.

The blocked wages and hours bill carries its own child labor ban, and some House leaders were said to feel that approval of the Wheeler-Johnson measure would remove a powerful next session argument for the wages bill. Representative John A. Martin, of Colorado, House sponsor of the child labor ban, said it could only be considered by unanimous consent, and that was improbable.

Nearly Quit Last Night.

So sprightly was yesterday's action that until the conference deadlock developed on the housing bill it looked as if Congress might adjourn last night.

After passing the deficiency bill, the Senate took a 15-minute recess to give Barkley an opportunity to check up on adjournment possibilities. Deciding it was hopeless, the leader returned and recessed the Senate overnight.

That gave House members their longed-for opportunity to consider private measures (granting pension and relief claims and authorizing local construction), even though they had to hold a night session to do it.

Postmn Pick D. C.

New Orleans, Aug. 20 (AP).—The National Rural Letter Carriers Association re-elected Raymond H. Combs, of Churchville, N. Y., and Leland M. Walker, of Waukomis, Okla., president and vice president, at their closing session today, and selected Washington for the 1938 convention.

Reserve Board Eases Credit In Two Districts

Discount Rate at Atlanta and Chicago Cut to Aid Farmer, Business.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board approved last night a reduction from 2 to 1¾ per cent in the discount rate of the Atlanta and Chicago reserve banks. It said this would help member institutions in those areas to utilize reserve bank credit more easily "in connection with crop movements and business needs."

The reduction, the board said, "brings the rates into closer relation with the interest rate structure generally prevailing, and afford to member banks the benefit of rates on advances made by the Federal Reserve Bank which are in line with those available in the money market."

Provides Easy Credit.

The board expressed the view that reduction in the discount rates "would assist in carrying out the (reserve) system's policy of monetary ease."

The reduction, it was said, will provide easy credit without encouraging member institutions to borrow outside their districts or to liquidate security holdings to meet the needs of their borrowers.

The board noted excess reserves, or lendable bank funds, remain at the high level of about $750,000,000 for the reserve system as a whole.

But, it added, the reserves are distributed preponderantly among so-called "country" banks rather than the Nation's money centers.

Demands Increase.

It said that with continued recovery, demands of agriculture, industry and commerce for credit have increased substantially, and that the discount rate reduction, which is effective tomorrow, will "promote continuance of recovery."

The action indicated the board did not believe any general loosening of credit was necessary for the Nation as a whole, because this could have been accomplished by a reduction in deposit reserve requirements.

'Go Back Where You Came From,' WPA Writers Told

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 20 (AP). In the forefront of mounting criticism of a WPA guidebook's treatment of labor issues and the famous Sacco-Vanzetti case came a demand tonight from Gov. Charles F. Hurley for dismissal of Federal writers who "maliciously besmirch the proud record of Massachusetts."

Applause at the State American Legion convention greeted the stocky Governor's declaration:

"If these men don't like Massachusetts and the United States, they can go back where they came from."

At the textile city of Lawrence, whose mayor yesterday attacked the book's history of the 1912 Lawrence general strike, State Representative Edward D. Rirois (Republican), suggested State police seize all copies of the book, of which 10,000 have been printed.

Ickes Wants Roosevelt Given All Reform Power

By the United Press.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes last night said authority for reorganizing executive branches of the Government should be delegated solely to the President.

Pleading in a Columbia network broadcast for establishment of a Department of Conservation to succeed the Interior Department, Ickes declared the new department should, in the interest of unified planning for the future, be given charge of forest preserves now under the Agriculture Department. He said he did not know whether the President favored such a transfer.

Roosevelt Issues Going To People, Liberal Says

By the United Press.

Representative Jerry J. O'Connell (Democrat), Montana, in a radio speech last night pledged that the House liberal bloc will carry the fight to the people in the 1938 elections against "those Red-baiting, breast-beating, labor-hating tories" who blocked legislation asked by the President and by liberals.

"No Congress in my memory has ever disappointed the people of this country more than this one," said O'Connell in an address transmitted by the National Broadcasting Co.

Wheeler, O'Mahoney and Burke Attacked in Senator's Radio Talk; Hughes' 'Sneer' at Majorities Also Charged.

Guffey called it a "sneering reference" and said Hughes' speech was "political in tone." He said if Hughes referred to the last election returns for Roosevelt it was "no temporary majority, but a host which the New Deal made permanent."

Cites 1924 Campaign.

Guffey pointed at least a third of his speech at Wheeler; told of his 1924 campaign for Vice President as La Follette's running mate. He said Wheeler promised at that time to offer a constitutional amendment giving Congress power to re-enact legislation over judicial veto, and has never done so.

"The Montana Senator, Mr. Wheeler, if and when he again seeks a high national office, will have to give to the people of the United States something more than academic argument in explanation of this broken promise," said Guffey.

He said Wheeler had assumed the "unnatural role of champion of these judicial servants of our economic overlords—judicial servants whose sycophantic servitude has destroyed respect for the court as an institution and reduced its prestige to that of the least of its common political denominators."

Predicts Defeat.

After assailing the records of Senators Burke and O'Mahoney, and denying Wheeler's claim that O'Mahoney aided in swinging the Northwest for Roosevelt, Guffey said:

"I now predict that when the voters of Wyoming next cast their ballots in the Democratic primaries of 1940, the now senior Senator from Wyoming (O'Mahoney) will be returned to 'his home on the range where the deer and the antelope roam.'

"As to Senator Burke, of Nebraska, I doubt if he has the political courage to even consider entering the Democratic primaries in his State in 1940.

"The record shows that both Senators O'Mahoney and Burke actively solicited President Roosevelt's support in their Senatorial campaigns. The record shows that without his support they never would have been elected to the United States Senate. In the face of that record, these two Senators then signed a report which slurred the patriotism and the motives of the President."

Pennsylvania's Democratic chieftain said "there is no greater mistake in public life than for a man to be disloyal to those who helped bring success to his career" and "political ingratitude is of such a character that it carries with it its own punishment, both swift and effective."

Refers to Pledges.

Guffey referred to the recent pledges of Wheeler and other court plan opponents to go into the States of their colleagues to defend them if the Administration seeks their defeat.

"I have no doubt but that Senator Wheeler will devote much time to seeking ways and means of establishing proof of his own liberalism and loyalty to his platform pledges, rather than to a defense of such Senators as O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Burke of Nebraska, and some other signers of that infamous adverse report of the Senate Judiciary Committee," he said.

Guffey said O'Mahoney may have helped to organize his own State for Roosevelt, "but it is absurd to state that he was a major factor in swinging the Northwest to Mr. Roosevelt." He read what he called a "roll of honor" of Democrats who campaigned for Roosevelt in the Northwest, and said O'Mahoney wasn't entitled to the "palm." Actually, he said, O'Mahoney was aided by Roosevelt support. He said O'Mahoney did not come into "national prominence" until Roosevelt appointed him Assistant Postmaster General.

Swings at Burke.

Then Guffey swung heavily at Burke, whom he said "very wisely linked himself with the President" in his 1934 campaign and ran for the Senate on a definition of the New Deal.

"Once he was elected, however," Guffey said, "he almost immediately cut his ties with the New Deal and the President and as a matter of fact his record, as a member of the United States Senate, will disclose that at least 90 per cent of his votes have been against important and needed New Deal legislation."

The Pennsylvanian quoted what he said was a conversation with the late Senate Majority Leader Robinson, on the day before he died.

"Senator Joe," he quoted Robinson as saying, "there are just two acts in my more than a quarter of a century service in the Senate that I regret—you are responsible for one—the seating of Rush Holt (Senator from West Virginia). The other was that when I attended the funeral of the late Senator Kendrick, of Wyoming, I visited Gov. Miller of that State and urged upon him the appointment of Joseph C. O'Mahoney to the then existing senatorial vacancy. I did that at the request of the Roosevelt Administration."

Hints Fight Revival.

Several times he hinted that the Administration's court fight might be revived. He said, "This Congress has failed to grasp the greatest opportunity for the establishment of a true democracy in this Nation that has ever been afforded to any Congress. But there will be other Congresses—Congresses that will not come to Washington and function here under the superstition that black robes make gods of men."

Farley in his Indiana speech earlier said charges of a rift in Democratic ranks are "pure politics, nothing but politics and, to my mind, stupid politics." Farley said, "There is no more substance to the scarecrows and to the phantoms that are being invoked by our political foes in 1937 than there was in 1936."

Hoover Denies Rift.

Palo Alto, Calif., Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Former President Hoover in a press statement tonight dismissed as "piffle," reports and "notions" there was dissension among Republican leaders over proposals for a general party conference in 1938 to consider "fundamental principles."

His statement said:

"The press carried a statement from Washington that the idea of a general conference of all Republican leaders and of all delegates in the spring of 1938 for the purpose of making a declaration of fundamental principles was not discussed with Gov. Landon or Mr. John Hamilton.

"That statement is untrue. The idea arises from leaders in many States. Some of them have discussed it with Gov. Landon and so far as I know discussions are still proceeding. It was discussed months ago with Mr. Hamilton, who undertook to recommend the proposal to the Republican national executive committee.

"The notion that there is friction over such discussion is piffle."

Only Two Dates On Mr. Roosevelt's Calendar Filled

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt parried a question yesterday as to whether he contemplates a Western tour that would afford him an opportunity to campaign for legislation defeated at the present session of Congress.

He replied he has only two definite dates thus far—September 17 and Thanksgiving Day.

On September 17—Constitution Day—he will motor to Sharpsburg, Md., to attend the seventy-fifth anniversary celebration of the Civil War Battle of Antietam. The same evening, on the Washington Monument grounds here, he will deliver an address.

His customary Thanksgiving Day party with the crippled patients at Warm Springs, Ga., is his only other engagement, the President said. He intends to leave Washington for Hyde Park within ten days after Congress adjourns.

Senator Protests At Six-Toed Art In Capitol's Halls

By the Associated Press.

Bennett Champ Clark, Democratic Senator from Missouri, took newspapermen on a tour of the Capitol yesterday to demonstrate that Congress ought to exercise care in hiring artists.

Clark proved to everybody's satisfaction that some painters whose works adorn the Capitol have had a distorted conception of physiology.

Exhibit number one was a painting of an incident in the life of Pocahontas. One plump Indian has six toes.

Number two was a painting showing the signing of the Declaration of Independence. In it, two girls stand arm in arm—but, Senator Clark pointed out, the little girls have five hands between them.

20,000 Firms To Receive Bill For New Levy

September 15 Is Deadline for Gross Receipts Tax for 1936.

About 20,000 businessmen in Washington will receive tax bills shortly calling for payment of the new business privilege levy of two-fifths of 1 per cent on gross receipts for 1936.

Those subject to the tax were notified yesterday by Deputy Assessor Charles A. Russell they must pay their tangible personal property taxes before September 15, if they wish to claim exemption on the personal tax.

Gasoline importers also received notice from the tax department, calling upon them to secure licenses and post bonds. Bonds for 39 importers range from $5,000 to $20,000 each and are figured on a basis of three times the average monthly tax paid by the importer.

Returns for the new business privilege tax are due on September 15. It is expected to bring $3,000,000 into the municipal treasury. Personal property taxes are deductible from the business privilege tax. A flat exemption of $2,000 is another feature of the tax.

The gasoline importers' bonding system was devised by Congress to seal leaks of revenue. Officials have discovered that some gasoline distributors failed to pay their taxes, or were delinquent.

Auditor Donovan said the 62 new clerks needed will be hired soon. They will be drawn from civil service rolls.

Businessmen wishing to take advantage of deductions must pay their personal property taxes by September 16, Donovan explained. If their personal property taxes are not half paid by that date they cannot claim an exemption in their business privilege tax returns, he said.

Roosevelts Cheered By Youth of Party

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, Aug. 20.—President Roosevelt's wife and son James shared the platform today at opening sessions of the third biennial convention of the Young Democratic Clubs of America.

Nearly 10,000 perspiring members shouted approval of James Roosevelt's keynote speech and Mrs. Roosevelt's adjuration to "work at being patriotic citizens."

Collars wilted but ardor undampened, they came back tonight for an address by Postmaster General Farley, the party's national chairman.

Between the afternoon and evening sessions aspirants for the presidency of the organization carried on a campaign almost as torrid as the weather. The election is to be held Saturday.

Veterans of '98 Rally.

Chinese Woman's Body Riddled Shielding U. S. Photographer in Air Raid

Two Newsmen Mistaken for Native Officers

Reporter's Helmet Dented in Rain of Bombs and Bullets From Planes.

(H. R. Ekins, United Press war correspondent, who has been the only foreign newspaperman to penetrate areas where the Chinese are fighting, tonight tells how he narrowly escaped death from Japanese aerial machine gunners on the outskirts of Shanghai. —Editor's note.)

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai, Aug. 20.—There are two little dents in my tin hat tonight, and they tell me more eloqently than words how it feels to be in a war.

Today I raced death and the rat-ta-tat of Japanese machine guns to reach the safety of the International Settlement, and I know how those poor devils out there feel—the ones you read about in dispatches that tell of air raids and bombs that blow humans to bits.

Two days ago I bought a field helmet to go out into the territory behind the Chinese lines and find out what it was all about, but it was not until today that I heard—rather than felt—the clink of steel against steel on that helmet. It told me I had missed a bullet in my brain by a matter of inches.

Rudolph Brandt, a news photographer, was with me on this expedition out across Soochow Creek into Chinese territory west of the settlement.

We drove out Bubbling Well road, past shops and houses of foreigners that only a fortnight ago were peacefully occupied; then pushed into Chinese territory, zig-zagging out Tunsin road, until we reached the Chungshan Road Bridge.

Ahead was open territory.

Five Japanese planes roared over the creek and swooped down on us. Brandt jumped out to get a picture, and I shouted:

"Get the hell back in the car—we're wasting time."

The little ping of the first bullet on my tin hat verified the words. Another bullet ricocheted off Brandt's helmet, and at that instant we heard and felt a terrific blast.

I saw an old Chinaman fly through the air like a football, turning crazily end over end. He came down like a slow-motion picture and landed on his stomach.

Around our car a gravish-blue cloud of smoke puffed up.

Brandt and I hit the ground together. Brandt raced across the road to a building and dived for its shelter, and I stood beside the car.

Bullets Killed Woman.

After he got back I asked Brandt to give me his notes of what he remembered. Here they are:

"I saw the planes returning, machine-gunning the road. A Chinese woman ran down the street and jumped on top of me.

"The planes passed over, and I turned over. The woman rolled off me, dead. There were bullets through her back.

"I looked for Ekins, who had been standing in the street. I wanted to be able to tell how he died.

"I saw him still standing in the middle of the road. He shouted to me to get into the car. I refused, and he went over himself and climbed in.

"As soon as he got in the car another bomb burst almost in his face. He remained on the bridge a few minutes and I thought he was dead. Then the car started backing over bodies lying on the bridge.

"Before he could reach me the planes started machine-gunning again. I ran for shelter. I looked back and Ekins was still in the car.

Mistaken for Chinese.

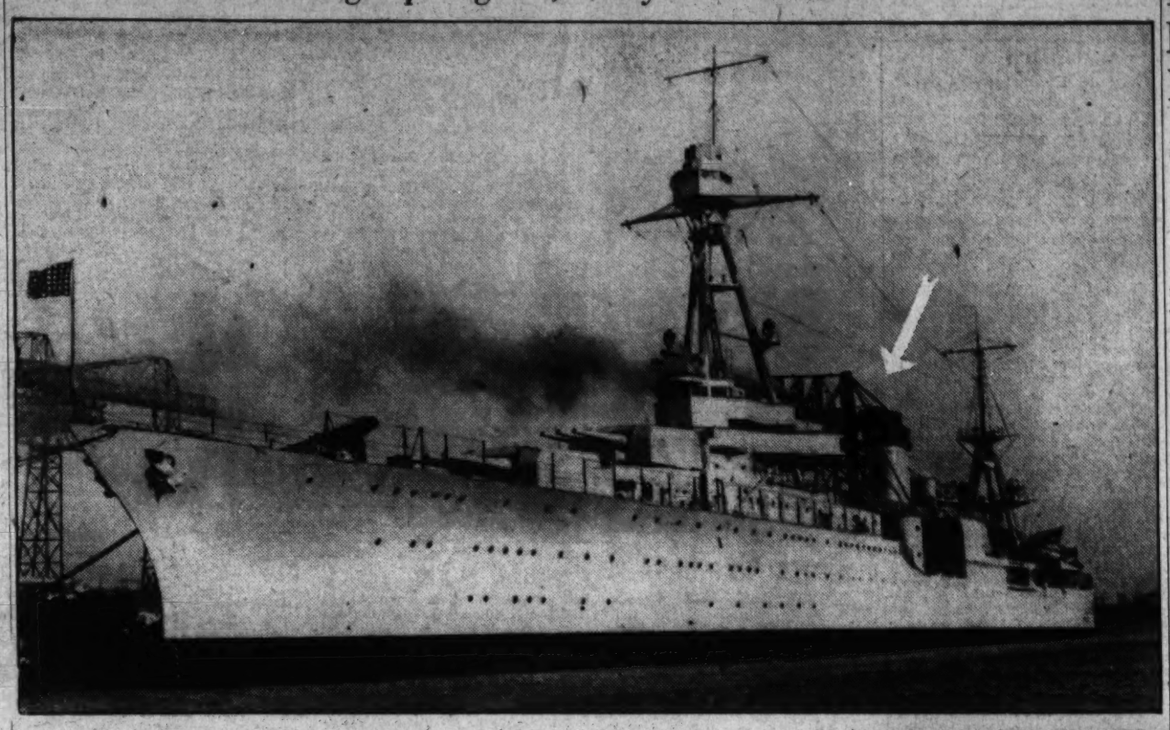

"I jumped in and we headed for the Settlement.

"Some Japanese, seeing our helmets and khaki clothes, must have thought we were Chinese officers and aimed directly at our car. Ekins was very white. His eyes were large and I couldn't see his lips. He was driving about 60 miles an hour.

"As soon as we reached the Settlement we went to a restaurant and he told me to write my impressions, but I could only think of the old Chinese being blown through the air, and the woman dying to save my life.

"Ekins sarcastically congratulated me on having the presence of mind to lock the ignition during the bombing, but I never remembered doing it."

U. S. Flagship Augusta, Hit by Anti-Aircraft Shell

Bombardment Sets Fourth of Shanghai Afire, Flames Spreading; Shells Hit French Quarter

ternational Settlement exchanged steel with the Japanese warships on the river, their shells screaming over or near the International areas, where tens of thousands of foreigners remained despite the wholesale evacuations of this week. Warships helped evacuate 1,100 United States citizens today.

The International Settlement rocked to the explosions. Shells from both sides fell on the border of the French concession, where most of the Americans lived, adding fresh fears. As far as could be learned, no foreigners were killed ashore.

The battle which had surged through the Hongkew-Yangtzepoo district last night apparently was stalemated. Chinese and independent sources reported the desperate Chinese advance had actually breached the Japanese front and pushed the Japanese back almost to the Whangpoo River, but this was not confirmed. Japanese officers said their lines had held and even advanced. It was known definitely bitter fighting continued around the Ward road jail, several hundred yards from the waterfront.

Again the Japanese air force carried the war inland to Nanking, the Chinese capital, and the American embassy there was rocked by bomb explosions but not damaged. Fourteen planes took part in the raid. Ten Chinese were killed in the burning of a hospital and several soldiers wounded when bombs fell in a barracks inclosure. No Americans were hurt.

Chinese claims their air bombers had sunk a Japanese warship off the coast south of Shanghai were not confirmed.

Chinese reported their shore batteries at Liuho, on the south bank of the Yangtze River 17 miles northwest of Shanghai, had turned back a Japanese attempt to land there an army newly arrived from Japan, under cover of a naval barrage. Chinese reinforcements totaling three divisions, were rushed to the Liuho area to keep the invaders from getting a foothold.

It was at Liuho that two Japanese divisions landed in 1932 to take the Chinese defenders in the rear, compel them to retreat and thus end the five-week war.

Extra police precautions were taken against food riots by the hundreds of thousands of native refugees swarming through the international areas. Some have had next to no food for two weeks. Police turned those caught looting food shops out into the war zone.

Chinese reports from North China declared divisions of the Chinese regular army were taking part in a sweeping offensive designed to drive the Japanese from their recent conquests in northeastern Hopei Province, including the great cities of Tientsin and Peiping.

The war in that area, 600 miles or more from the Shanghai battlezone, with a total of some 200,000 to 250,000 men engaged, continued bitterly on several fronts, although disruption of normal channels of communication and restrictions placed by the new Japanese masters of North China made accounts of it fragmentary and conflicting.

The Chinese said two of their columns were striking northward at Peiping and Tientsin, another was holding the Japanese at bay in the rugged defiles of Nankow Pass northwest of Peiping, while a fourth swept eastward in Chahar Province to drive at the rear of the steadily-growing Japanese army that is trying to hammer its way through Nankow, gateway to Mongolia and Inner Asia.

The vanguard of the column driving on Tientsin, Chinese reports said, was only 10 miles from that city. The threat of Japan's hold on Peiping was said to be such the Japanese were establishing a secondary defense position at Shangsintien, only 15 miles southwest of Peiping. The main Japanese position was at Lianghsiang, 20 miles from Peiping on the railway to Hankow.

Disciplinarian Heads Japanese In North China

Lieut. Gen. Katsuki Holds Many Honors; Speaks Only in Commands.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 20.—Japan's hopes in North China rest on the soldierly, capable shoulders of Lieut. Gen. Kiyoshi Katsuki.

He is the man of the hour for multitudes of Japanese, and in thousands of homes his picture is enshrined on altars.

Gen. Katsuki is a soldier's soldier, bold, decisive, silent. His only words are commands.

This veteran campaigner, to whom Emperor Hirohito has assigned control of all Japan's fighting forces in North China—and upon whose decisions the future of the whole empire may depend—is a rigid disciplinarian above all else.

Other militarists say he is singularly able to restrain the aggressiveness of the more reactionary groups of younger officers who are serving with him in China.

Gen. Katsuki is the senior officer of his rank. His record since the Russo-Japanese war is sprinkled with citations for heroism and military strategy.

As a lieutenant in the war with Russia, he won honors seldom given to subalterns except for remarkable feats of bravery. Emperor Meiji decorated him with the fifth class Order of the Sacred Kite for his distinguished record in active service.

After the war, Gen. Katsuki enrolled in the Military Staff College, a turning point in his career because, after graduation, he was assigned as military commissioner in Berlin. There he acquired many of his principles of military discipline through observation of the imperial Prussian war machine.

He returned to Japan and rose steadily through the ranks.

Gen. Katsuki's reputation won him the assignment as head of the Imperial Bodyguards after the February, 1936, military revolt.

Nye Condemns Post Views on Japanese War

Contends Neutrality Law Should Be Invoked in New Crisis.

Senator Gerald P Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, in a radio interview over the Columbia Broadcasting System, last night assailed the editorial in yesterday's Washington Post, which criticized Japanese activities in the present conflict in the Far East and applauded the Administration's decision not to invoke the neutrality act at this time.

In response to questions from Bob Trout, his interviewer, Senator Nye was contending that this Government should invoke the neutrality act at once against China and Japan when he referred to The Post editorial.

"At least one important paper this morning definitely charged that the Administration was not going to apply the law, that it had in fact gone down with the wind," suggested Trout.

"Such a charge, to my mind, was irresponsible and unfounded," Senator Nye asserted. "What is true, however, is that failure to apply the law has left the way open for the press to start an anti-Japanese agitation which may have very serious consequences, though I believe that earlier experiences, when the press has encouraged a war spirit and created a war situation finally costing many thousands of American lives, have taught the American people to take what it reads in its morning headlines calmly and to think for itself.

"I particularly regretted to see The Washington Post, looked upon as a responsible and dignified paper, raising the same old war-guilt cry against Japan that was raised against Germany and that the world now knows was unjustified. When the press calls upon us, as The Post does, to 'stop Japan,' there is no way to carry out that phrase, so easy to write while you sit in a comfortable editorial chair, except to send thousands of our young men to die on the other side of the Pacific.

"If it is a question of war with Japan, then that is a question for Congress to decide. " would be a question which the people themselves would have the right and power to decide if the war referendum amendment, introduced in the House by Representative Ludlow and which I myself introduced in the Senate, had received the backing of the Administration."

Rebels Throttle Santander on Hills and Sea

Threaten Water Supply of Hungry City; Refugees Predict Quick Fall.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 20.—Generalissimo Francisco Franco's insurgent Spanish army tightened a stranglehold tonight on besieged, hungry Santander, last important city of the government on the Biscayan coast.

Fighting steadily forward, the insurgents were reported to have entered Arriela Park, source of Santander's water.

French and Belgian citizens fleeing to Bayonne said "it's only a question of days" until Santander meets the fate of insurgent-conquered Bilbao.

Hemmed in by an insurgent blockade on the sea and advancing insurgent columns in the hills to the south, the city faced a famine.

The United States destroyer Kane went to Santander to evacuate Americans. Other refugees were taken to French ports on French and British boats. The British freighter Boble arrived at Bayonne with 400 government wounded.

Insurgent drives centered along highways north to Santander from Burgos and Palencia. One insurgent report said 18,000 government troops were cut off south of Reinosa by insurgent occupation of the Reinosa-Corconte road.

Ankara, Turkey, Aug. 20 (AP).—The cabinet held an emergency meeting tonight following the unexpected return of Kemal Ataturk, President of Turkey, all ministers and Chief of Staff Fevzi from maneuvers. It was understood the meeting was called to discuss reported attacks on merchants shipping by an unidentified submarine in or near Turkish waters.

War Nipped Boom In Chinese Trade

By the Associated Press.

The outbreak of Sino-Japanese hostilities interrupted a broad business upswing in China, a Commerce Department report said yesterday.

Quoting Julean Arnold, its Shanghai commercial attache, the Department said that until the conflict with Japan started, China had promising prospects of balancing its budget.

"Throughout the Yangtze Valley and in south China rice prospects were excellent," the report said.

In the first half of this year, the report added, China experienced the greatest expansion in industrial activity since 1933. In Shanghai, all industries operated at capacity, new building construction increased 47 per cent over the first half of 1936 and real estate activity increased.

Diplomats Hail Neighborly Air Of Ship Policy

Latin Envoys Pleased by Brazil-U. S. Joint Stand on Lease Project.

By the Associated Press.

Latin American diplomats here yesterday said they regard the joint statement of Brazil and the United States that the two governments are "not disposed to enter into any controversy" with other nations over the proposal to lease six destroyers to Brazil and the offer of others to all the American nations as in accord with the good-neighbor policy."

Pending official word from their governments, they said, they could not be quoted on their stand on the statement. One said they considered the declarations as "serving notice that the widespread reaction to the proposal is 'making a mountain out of a molehill.'"

A previous canvass of the Latin-American reaction to the plan is understood to have been made by the Brazilian government, and to have been, with the exception of Argentina, favorable.

United States and Brazilian officials expressed the view all opposition ultimately will be withdrawn.

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, repeated that Congress probably would take no action before adjournment on the ship legislation.

Chairman Sam D. McReynolds of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said he would do nothing about the leasing bill until "the reaction of the South American governments" is determined.

Nerves worn raw by the Shanghai ordeal snapped under the terrifying spectacle of swaying buildings as the 376 refugees stepped ashore in the Philippine capital.

But a semblance of calm and order soon returned and the refugees told their stories as they awaited transfer to shelter already prepared for them here.

In a radio broadcast to the United States Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., vividly described the outbreak of the fighting.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her son Quentin, who arrived aboard the rescue ship, said the conflict started Sunday, August 15, shortly after an infuriated mob pursued five Japanese, severely beating one.

"Soon after this," she said, "signal lights began winking and circling seaplanes came lower. Then anti-aircraft guns broke loose."

She and her son ran from their hotel to their automobile, telling their driver to take them to Canton road, a few blocks down the Bund from the first explosions. They awaited the passing of the air raid and ventured back to their quarters, passing through streets littered with hundreds of mangled dead.

Lived Four Years in D. C.

Mrs. O'Toole, the former Maud Miller, is a native of Hardington, Nebr. She was married to O'Toole about 20 years ago in St. Louis, where he was a recruiting officer during the war. In 1919 O'Toole was transferred to Washington as a warrant officer.

During the next few years he held positions in numerous Marine posts, including Nicaragua and Haiti. In 1931 he and his wife returned to Washington, where they remained for four years. They made their home at 4550 Connecticut avenue. They have no children.

While in Washington Mrs. O'Toole was employed as a teller at the Commercial National Bank. Following the 1933 bank holiday, when the Commercial National closed, she took a position with the McLachlen Banking Corporation which she held until she and her husband left for Shangai in 1935.

Her mother, Mrs. J. E. Miller, and her brothers, Vernon and Ralph Miller, live at 1812 D street northeast.

Mrs. John B. Barnes, of 3825 Cathedral avenue northwest, received a letter from Mrs. O'Toole about 10 days ago. She did not refer to the impending crisis in Shanghai, but said she and her husband expected to be transferred back to Washington about the end of September.

"Mrs. O'Toole said she was having difficulty buying clothes in Shanghai," Mrs. Barnes told The Post last night, "so I bought three felt hats and mailed them to her. She probably never will get those hats now."

Faithful Mary Abandons Divine To Set Up an Opposition Heaven

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 20.—Faithful Mary, the erstwhile head angel of Father Divine's Harlem seraphar-chy, set up an opposition heaven of her own today.

Thus, with a five-story brownstone building to be known henceforth as her House of Universial Light, she signalized her disaffection from the Divine "heaven," which is still running at the old stand.

Worse yet—for Father Divine—she announced she had become an author, and a skeptical author at that, with a work whose title page bears this legend:

God.

He's Just a Natural Man.

He Ain't No God.

By Faithful Mary.

And while Faithful Mary, in the House of Universal Light, was giving visitors a special preview of its magnificence and of the purple and white robes she is going to wear, a court action disclosed that The Spoken Word, a Harlem paper that in the past had carried the celestial manifestoes of Father Divine, had suspended publication.

Faithful Mary's heaven is to have a grand opening soon, with pork chops and spare ribs for 3,000 persons.

She broke with Father Divine sometime ago; said it was a money question.

Urge Neutrality Action.

Some members of Congress declared the United States neutrality act, banning shipment of war materials to belligerent nations, should be invoked against China and Japan without further delay.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, suggested the Government withdraw naval and other forces from the war zone as soon as American citizens can be taken to safety.

But Mr. Roosevelt gave no indication he would invoke the neutrality law or withdraw military forces in the near future.

By the Associated Press.

Word come from a meeting of President Roosevelt's Cabinet late yesterday it was a Japanese shell that struck the American cruiser Augusta, killing one sailor and wounding 18.

One member disclosed the Cabinet had spent considerable time discussing the shelling, which occurred in the undeclared Sino-Japanese war around Shanghai.

He did not reveal whether Washington officials contemplated any action.

President Roosevelt previously had announced, after receiving first fragmentary word of the disaster, that officials on the scene were in a better position than he to determine what should be done.

At his press conference the President declared incidents like the falling of the shell on the Augusta's deck were almost bound to happen in situations such as that at embattled Shanghai.

Local, U. S. Officials Confer; Hopkins Rejects Plea for Army Tents.

Increasing health problems attending the Workers Alliance "job march" brought hurried conferences between local and Federal authorities yesterday as WPA Administrator Hopkins refused to provide housing facilities for approximately 1,000 members of an advance contingent.

With additional "marchers" arriving hourly, National Capital Park officials are prepared to order the Monument Grounds encampment moved to a golf course south of the Naval Hospital. Visitors to the Monument yesterday complained the marchers were washing clothes in public drinking fountains.

And while officials considered their next move, police arrested eight delegates for distributing handbills in front of the Labor Department. Three men and five women were taken to the First Precinct Station, where they deposited $5 collateral each for appearance in Police Court today. The handbills protested dismissal of WPA workers and demanded jobs for those now unemployed.

3,500 Expected.

Seeking "immediate passage" of the Schwellenbach-Allen resolution, which provided WPA jobs for all persons unable to secure private employment, the marchers claim their numbers will swell to 3,500 by tomorrow. Police, however, predict the number will not exceed 2,000.

David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance, appealed to Hopkins for cots and adequate housing facilities for his "people." He asked that tents used at the recent Boy Scout Jamboree also be provided.

Hopkins, however, flatly refused to aid. He said the tents belonged to the Army and the Scouts posted a $500,000 bond for their use. He added, "You want things we cannot give you under the law and you want other things I'd not give you if I could."

Cut to 1,527,450.

At the same time, Hopkins announced yesterday that the Works Progress Administration rolls had been reduced to 1,527,450 persons during the week ended August 14. During the past 18 months, he said, 1,500,000 had left WPA to be absorbed by private industry.

A small picket line was in front of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce yesterday. The pickets carried placards demanding work and calling for WPA jobs. A police detail quietly looked on.

Permission to parade through downtown streets Tuesday will be granted the marchers, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, announced, but it is expected that permission to parade anywhere near the White House will be refused.

$20,000,000 Awaits Opening of Grave In Search of Will

Philadelphia, Aug. 20 (AP).—Somewhere is a will distributing the $20,000,000 fortune of Henrietta E. Garrett, her namesake claims—and so the grave of the widow Garrett will be opened to determine if it was hidden there.

Attorneys for the State of Pennsylvania, which claims the undistributed part of the estate on ground Mrs. Garrett left no heirs, agreed today to the opening of the grave next month.

Mrs. Henrietta Garrett Ferguson, daughter of an Atlantic City physician and a large beneficiary under a will signed by Mrs. Garrett in 1921, said she witnessed a later will in 1924. She believes someone dissatisfied with its contents hid it.

Labor Leaders Join to Attack Wage Bill

abuses in our industrial life. . . . The Democratic Party was chosen by the voters in 1936 because its chief and his subordinate leaders promised to take the positive action required by our critical situation.

"The spectacle of four or five members of a House Rules Committee defeating the will of the people of the United States is one that must cause the grayest concern to all believers in democracy."

Green said that "it becomes quite clear that the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives has thus far prevented the enactment of the wages and hours measure into law."

"Stifles Legislation."

"Apparently," he went on, "the Rules Committee of this session of Congress is stifling and defeating legislation just the same as did the Rules Committee which operated under the complete domination of Cannon and his reactionary associates when they completely controlled and dominated Congress in days gone by.

"Here is a measure which passed the Senate by an overwhelming vote and which was practically unanimously reported by the House Labor Committee. Notwithstanding this fact, the Rules Committee arbitrarily says Congressmen shall not be permitted to vote for or against the measure.

"What right has the Rules Committee to defeat the will of Congress? Surely, the members of Congress ought to be accorded the privilege of passing the wages and hours bill, or of defeating it. That is democracy and democratic procedure.

"Congress should remain in session until it passes the wages and hours bill."

His reference to "Cannon" appeared to be to Speaker Joe Cannon and the House machine he headed early in the century.

Green earlier in the day conferred with President Roosevelt on labor legislation, and invited the President to speak at the A. F. of L. convention to be held in Denver.

Hillman's criticism of members who defeated the wages-hours bill was notable in its denial that a sectional issue was involved. The textile workers' chieftain is an associate of Lewis in the Committee for Industrial Organization, but has not hesitated to differ with him.

"The issue presented by the amazing attitude of the Rules Committee . . . is by no means a sectional one," he said yesterday.

"Extreme Northern conservatives, most of them in Republican ranks, are combined with the extreme conservatives of the South to block action on this vitally important bill at this session . . .

"Labor in the Southern States is more in need of the minimum wage, maximum hour and child labor provisions of the Black-Connery bill than is Northern labor. Workers everywhere, and fair, reasonable employers everywhere, require protection against the chiselling fraction which lives practically upon every industry."

Church Press To Be Topic at Williamstown

Father LaFarge Will Conduct Talks at Human Relations Institute.

A special round-table on the subject of the religious press, which will be conducted by the Rev. John LaFarge, S. J., associate editor of America, Catholic Review-of-the-Week, will be one of the principal sections of the Institute of Human Relations, to be held on the campus of Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., August 29 through September 3. The institute will be held under the auspices of the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

This discussion of the religious press will have particular significance because it marks the first time that prominent Catholic, Jewish and Protestant editors have taken part together in a forum of this type.

Father LaFarge will open the forum with a discussion of "Ways of Extending the Influence of the Religious Press." His address will be given on August 30 and will be followed on the next day by an address on "Problems of a Distinctly Jewish Religious Press," which will be delivered by Dr. Alexander Brin, editor of the Boston Jewish Advocate.

Dr. Guy K. Shipler, editor of the Churchman, a Protestant periodical, will discuss on September 1 "Intergroup Relations and the Religious Press." Louis Minsky, associate editor of the N. C. J. C. News Service, will speak on "The N. C. J. C. News Service and the Religious Press."

After each talk an open forum will be held in which it is expected that many Catholic, Protestant and Jewish editors will participate.

The general theme of the Williamstown Institute this year will be "Public Opinion in a Democracy." This topic was chosen because of its timeliness and concern to large numbers of Catholics, Jews and Protestants throughout the world.

The Institute of Human Relations was organized by the National Conference of Jews and Christians to give an opportunity for leaders of the three faiths to consider without prejudice or favor some of their common interests as citizens in American communities.

The Augusta Incident.

When a German warship was bombed by a Spanish government plane in the Mediterranean, early this summer, the response of the Hitler government was immediate and characteristic. The Spanish seaport of Almeria was shelled by a German squadron, which inflicted heavy loss of life on helpless and innocent noncombatants. Thus Nazi honor was satisfied.

There is not the slightest likelihood of any similar reprisals in the case of the antiaircraft shell which hit the cruiser Augusta at Shanghai last night, killing 1 sailor and wounding 18 others. And this is not merely because the damage to the American ship was less serious than that suffered by the German vessel, and the episode apparently more accidental.

President Roosevelt is acting very wisely is leaving the matter of protest in the hands of our civil and naval representatives in Shanghai, who alone are in a position to judge the circumstances of the case. At this distance it is only possible to say, as Mr. Roosevelt pointed out, that tragic incidents of this kind are almost certain to arise under the conditions now ruling in the war zone.

Before the fighting at Shanghai is terminated there is all too much likelihood of a recurrence of happenings of this sort. China is now engaged in a defensive struggle for national existence. Japan is bending every nerve to break the strength of her victim before it can be adequately co-ordinated to throw the aggressor out. It is unlikely that either side will use delicacy or restraint in its methods.

It is important, however, that the facts of the shelling of the Augusta be investigated and that in this, as in any similar incidents, the responsible parties shall be held to future accountability. In such final reckonings our Government is not likely to be harsh on China. Her desperate need, the defensive character of her military moves, and the handicap of special foreign privileges on her soil are all important extenuating circumstances.

But no such considerations of equity would apply in any instance where Japanese action may cause injury to legitimate American interests in China. As the wanton aggressor in this war Japan must be expected to make good any and all damage caused to American nationals by her policy. Unpleasant consequences later may be averted if this is made very plain to the Japanese military command as a result of the killing of Seaman Falgout.

Lost In The Shuffle.

Failure of the Juvenile Court bill to pass at this session of Congress is an especially keen disappointment because of recent indications that the measure would go through. Undoubtedly that would have been the outcome if the bill had been given the attention it deserves.

Important District legislation is too often caught in the legislative jams which invariably precede an adjournment of Congress. National bills threatened by the same fate are usually given the right of way. Indeed, Congress usually plans to remain in session until all vitally important national measures can be approved. But no such consideration is shown the District. If a local bill is in any way controversial, its chances for enactment at the fag end of a session are very meager.

Citizens of Washington have reason to be resentful when Congress handles important local matters so casually. But protests against that sort of treatment for the community seem to be futile. Nor does the full blame fall upon Congress. It necessarily puts national problems ahead of legislation for the District. And under the present inefficient system so much time is wasted on unimportant details regarding the local government that vital District bills are often allowed to drift without consistent legislative direction.

Unquestionably, the Senate and House District committees could have done a better job in piloting the Juvenile Court bill toward enactment. But the District is not in a position to call those committees to account. Its most effective remedy is to drive for a rationalization of the system which compels Congress to waste its energy upon petty local measures, thus reducing the time available for consideration of major District bills.

Fortunately, the progress already made toward enactment of the Juvenile Court bill will not be lost by postponing final action until next year. Even more important than prompt approval of modern technique in handling child delinquents, however, is the overhauling of the obsolete methods by which Washington is compelled to meet its community problems. It is this task to which major emphasis should be given at the next session.

A Belated Housing Effort.

Failure of the Administration's eleventh-hour attempt to amend the national housing act raises a question as to why that obviously constructive move was not initiated earlier in the session. There seems to be no real opposition to the policy of encouraging construction of low-cost dwellings by private enterprise. Rejection of the proposed amendments by the House merely indicates that Congress does not wish to take the time, so near its adjournment date, to analyze a new phase of the housing problem.

Apparently interest swung to private housing when it became evident that the number of families who might be benefited by the Wagner bill would be very limited. Senate amendments restricted activities under that measure to genuine slum reclamation. That is to say, slums would have to be abolished before new houses could be built, and the cost of each project would be rigidly limited.

These sensible provisions made it obvious, however, that no large volume of housing could be expected to result from the Wagner bill. And that realization stimulated considerable Congressional interest in the plan, long advocated by housing experts, to encourage an expansion of private building for families with low and moderate salaries.

The large-scale housing division of the FHA has already made an encouraging start in this field. Indeed, some of the multiple-family dwellings for which it has financed mortgages have been constructed at lower costs than the Government's own low-rental projects. But this branch of FHA has been seriously handicapped by the uncertain limits within which it may operate and by the absence of capital in the quantities required.

Sufficient large-scale building has been done to indicate that limited-dividend corporations can supply suitable dwellings in pleasant surroundings at very reasonable rentals. One real achievement of FHA has been the elimination of speculation from developments of this sort. Dividends must be limited to not more than 6 per cent, building plans must be carefully checked and approved and the financing of the project must be on an entirely sound basis.

It has been the commendable hope of FHA thus to make large-scale housing a field for sound business investment instead of a reckless gamble. Certainly that move should be encouraged. Indeed, it seems to be the only method by which the country can hope to obtain any considerable volume of housing for the families of small wage-earners in the near future.

It is especially unfortunate that amendments of such importance were held up until Congress was ready to adjourn. If the Administration is eager to improve housing conditions for the families of workers for whom no subsidies are available, it will give these proposed changes a prominent place on the legislative program to be recommended to the next session of Congress.

Unwelcome Resignations.

Rumors that Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady is contemplating resignation have been bruited about so often that one hesitates to give credence to the latest report to that effect. But unfortunately it is all too probable that a highly capable, energetic official like Mr. McGrady will eventually be enticed from the Federal service by attractive offers of private employment.

The higher positions in the present civil service unfortunately provide neither security of tenure nor monetary rewards commensurate with the importance of the tasks assigned. Consequently, the average length of service of assistant secretaries and undersecretaries has been considerably less than the duration of an administration. Yet the President's reorganization committee says assistant secretaries testify that it takes at least a year to "begin to master enough background to do more than move with the wheels."

Under such conditions it is almost a happy accident if the individual selected for a particular office possesses both the essential knowledge and the personal qualifications required to do a really good job. Mr. McGrady, with his specialized background and his remarkable skill as a negotiator, happens to be an outstanding example of the right man in the right place. For that reason his rumored retirement emphasizes the need of reforms in our methods of recruiting for the civil service.

Instead of receiving indeterminate appointments, all except a very few policy-making officials should be assured permanency of tenure, with appointments based upon merit and advancement assured by promotion. In other words, Government service should become a career offering adequate recognition and reward to first-rate talent. As it is, the higher posts in the service are too often filled by inexperienced men who regard Government employment as a training school equipping them for better paid private work.

Competent individuals like Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady, who remain long enough to give the Government the benefit of experience already acquired, do so at a personal sacrifice that they should not be asked and certainly cannot be expected to make.

Stability And Stabilization.

Wayne C. Taylor, Acting Secretary of the Treasury, has stated in a letter to Representative Dirksen that the United States "stands ready at all times to discuss with any nation, or any group of nations, joint efforts toward the maintenance of stability in international monetary matters." His assertion does not mean that this country is willing to stabilize the dollar permanently at any fixed ratio in terms of other currencies. Indeed, President Roosevelt quite recently reiterated his opposition to formal stabilization of the dollar at the present time.

There is no inconsistency between a policy which looks toward increasing stability of world currencies and rejection of plans for immediate stabilization of the dollar. Financial and political conditions throughout the world are too unsettled to permit of any definite action at this time designed to link currencies with one another in a rigid relationship.

Even if the United States were willing to forfeit strategic bargaining advantages in future negotiations by giving assurances that no further devaluation of the dollar is contemplated, that would not remove the uncertainties that affect the value of other currencies. And the exchange value of the dollar depends, after all, not simply upon an executive decree but upon the fluctuating values of the monetary units for which it is exchanged.

Any legitimate aid that we can render other countries to build up their trade balances and increase their exports should help them to maintain their exchanges on a sound and stable basis. Formal stabilization of the world's leading currencies, however, seems farther away today than it did a year or so ago. Devaluation of the gold-bloc currencies has not provided a solution of French financial difficulties. And the British are not disposed to discuss stabilization plans under existing unsettled conditions.

Wars and rumors of wars, and the increasing financial pressure caused by rearmament programs, are also major obstacles to any sort of definitive international monetary agreement at this time. Of course, stabilization agreements would help to cement and strengthen trading relationships under normal peacetime conditions. But it would be futile to expect more than a limited and provisional kind of stability when the movement of goods and capital between countries is so seriously hampered by disturbances over a large part of the globe.

Shades Of Lizzie Borden.

"Vass you efer in Chinchinnati?" No? Lucky for you, because you might have met up with Anna Hahn. Already dubbed "The Blonde Borgia" by the more excitable press, she has been indicted on charges of murdering two Ohioans while police are sifting evidence which suggests her implication in nine other deaths during the past eight years.

According to her husband, "she just loved to make old people comfy." This was all well and good until the peculiar methods of her thoughtful solicitude began to arouse suspicion. In the first place, she apparently selected only nicely financed oldsters on whom to shower attention. The next move was to persuade them to change their wills in her favor. This done, the final act of kindness appears to have followed quickly, though Mrs. Hahn hesitates to discuss it. The police, however, assert that 13 forged prescriptions for poisons and narcotics have been traced to her.

Mrs. Hahn came to this country from Germany. Here she married and today has a 12-year-old son. Originally she maintained she had once had a Viennese physician for a husband and had taught school in Munich. These statements, however, she has since repudiated for reasons best known to herself. In any event, she sits today behind bars—smartly dressed, neatly manicured and complimenting her guards on their courtesy. She complains only of an increasingly despressive sense that all the world turns against a person when trouble occurs.

The G-men have been called in to clear up the case. Mrs. Belloc Lowndes is really the person needed.

A recent survey shows that the average college professor has a low I. Q. if examined outside his own special line of knowledge. It seems that the only one around a college who knows everything is the sophomore.

Significant Safety Awards.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

Five hundred Atlanta school children, members of the school safety patrol, have been awarded certificates of merit for this work by the Atlanta Motor Club.

No acknowledgment of public service has been more deserved than these certificates. The school safety patrols, co-operating with the police traffic department, have been largely responsible for the splendid record of safety on the streets achieved by Atlanta's school children during the past year.

The pupils who filled the role of traffic directors and guardians for their classmates not only took their work seriously, but developed into expert apostles of safety.

The certificates they have received will be of continuing value to themselves and to the city, for the boy who has received such recognition is given inspiration to continue his work for safety all through life. Each of the 500 will grow to manhood imbued with the principles of proper conduct on the streets, whether as pedestrians or motorists, and will thus become 500 exemplars of safety always.

The awards provide another illustration of the basic importance of training in youth if coming generations are to reduce the ghastly toll of traffic carelessness which has wiped a constantly spreading smear of horror over the past quarter of a century.

Bank Liquidations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A news article in The Post today tells of a suit charging the Comptroller of Currency with disposing, in his official capacity of a bank liquidator, of a $500,000 orchard for $15,000. Although the courts will probably non-suit in this case on technical legalistic grounds, nevertheless it is well for citizens interested in New Deal practices to give a little study to this case.

Consider primarily that this orchard was sold privately, it was not offered to the public so that those knowing its real value might bid.

This is not an isolated case of this type. Down in Atlantic City they sold $175,000 worth of hotel equipment for less than $10,000, all private sales, principally to junk and second-hand dealers. Similarly they sold bank buildings themselves for prices materially below assessed valuations, to private parties not yet identified, but understood to be close to the Democratic machine in that district. The other day a propaganda release from the Comptroller's office told of how a closed bank had been liquidated at an average return to depositors of about 70 per cent. Actually, in Atlantic City, depositors have got about 5 per cent! Due, I submit, to transactions, savoring of the kind described.

This kind of Government business needs inquiry and Congress, instead of spending hundreds of thousands of dollars inquiring into strike phases, might do well to spend a little coin investigating the Comptroller's liquidation methods in the last few years. It is impossible to get the real low-down on most of these transactions because rigid secrecy surrounds most of them. Only now and then one of the transactions like those forming the basis of this latest suit seeps out.

The Tumult And The Shouting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anent the discussion over the confirmation of Senator Black as Supreme Court justice, Senator Tom Connally's statement on the floor and the points scored by Mr. Linn A. E. Gale in The Post of Monday are important and merit keeping in mind when similar situations arise in the future. The Senate's action in ratifying the nomination by an overwhelming vote indicates that these arguments were taken into consideration.

Senator Connally, it will be recalled, replying to the contention that Senator Black was lacking in judicial experience, remarked that Justices Butler, Sutherland, Brandeis, Stone and Roberts had no such experience before they were named to the High Court.

Mr. Gale called our attention to the fact that it is not even required that a Supreme Court justice be a lawyer, and that he might be an economist, a professor, a manual laborer, etc. This is true, and it might be added that it would probably make the supreme tribunal a body more calculated to interpret statutes in the light of modern conditions and the welfare of all of the people if it contained a member or two from some other field than the purely judicial.

After all, why should not the court include men—or even a woman or two—familiar with the problems, burdens and handicaps of the underprivileged who constitute such a vast proportion of our population? If Mr. Roosevelt has an opportunity to appoint others to the Supreme Court, it is my hope that he will deviate still farther from the old custom that has restricted membership so often to ice-cold jurists immersed in corporation law.

GEORGE NELSON.
Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reading history of the past one is often struck with the parallels that have existed in the past with the present conditions in our own country, and as the result of which governments were destroyed and the people lost their liberties.

In "The Life of Cleopatra and Her Times," by Weigall, is the following statement, that suggests the trend and tendencies in our country at present—the disastrous consequences of which should cause our people to pause and think:

The people of Rome now began to heap honors upon Caesar, and the government which he had established did not fail to justify its existence by voting him to a position of irrevocable power. He was made consul for ten years, and there was talk of decreeing him dictator for life. The Senate became simply an instrument for the execution of his commands, and so little did the members concern themselves with the framing of new laws at home, or with the details of foreign administration, that Cicero was unable to complain that in his official capacity he had received the thanks of Oriental potentates whose names he had never seen before for their elevation to thrones of kingdoms of which he had never heard. Caesar's interests were world-wide, and the government in Rome carried out his wishes in the manner in which an ignorant board of directors of a company with foreign interests follows the advices of its traveling manager.

And more to the same effect.

OBSERVER.
Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Newspaper editorials are so often expressions of fear, prejudice, hate and arrogance, and frequently set themselves up as immortal judges of the passing scene. This can be proven, perhaps, more adequately by reading newspapers of a few decades ago, which shows them to have been so often wrong when history had had its say. These editors must often cringe in their utter lack of judgment. However, the future is necessarily dimmed, and thus we may accept their editorials as honest (often questionable) mistakes which occurred through their lack of vision.

Newspapers often consider it their responsibility and unquestioned duty to mold public opinion, and in whatever direction the editor may choose. Indeed, editorials are even carried on between the lines of a news story on the first page.

During the recent Presidential election America witnessed newspaper service at its lowest ebb. Prejudice, propaganda, libelous rumors and slander filled the pages of most papers. The writer has no desire to convey the impression that he is in any way interested in the subject of a controversy, for reference is made to those newspapers which carried on well organized campaigns of prejudice, either pro-New Deal or anti-New Deal. Both acted without restraint and made vicious and insidious appeals to the reader. How cheap these stories now read! How they belied the truth! A great lesson was given then to newspaper publishers, but how quickly it has been forgotten! A newspaper is only as great as its readers, and isn't it time to realize that these readers want unbiased, intelligent reporting of the news, together with a sane and dispassionate editorial policy?

Our newspapers are unique and most important in our democracy. The people demand and shall always demand their freedom from governmental coercion, but the newspapers themselves must accept responsibility for the survival of the institution, must make of themselves a worthy institution.

The writer has observed a growing tendency of prejudice and passion in The Post, and points out recent editorials condemning the appointment of Senator Black to the United States Supreme Court. His qualifications or lack of qualifications are of no consequence as concerns this letter, but it does fall upon The Post, as upon all newspapers, to present intelligent and unprejudiced discussions of the events of the day. How disgusting your editorials will sound to those who look back upon their pages a few years hence.

Learn restraint; be more passive; cease leaning over backward to put across your views, for it is sometimes a bit awkward to straighten yourself up from such a ridiculous position. Make your editorials sound more as if they were written by the fine institution which your paper is than as if they were conceived in the narrow confines of a prejudiced individual.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to take the combination of a sixteenth century babe, an eighteenth century statesman and a nineteenth century English historian to bring out a tirade by a twentieth century President against groups whose function is to protect democracy and not to agree with him.

Heaven help him if they were in certain European nations.

Another Episcopalian.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post rendered a valuable service yesterday by publishing "Sorrowful's" letter. As an Episcopalian, I feel as he does. I think, however, that our responsibility is to correct evils in America.

Is "Sorrowful" aware that our own beloved Bishop Freeman, the American Archbishop of Canterbury, last October urged our House of Bishops to petition Congress and our President to effectuate the Kellogg-Briand pact and that the social service department of the House of Bishops introduced a resolution for that purpose which was almost adopted?

Perhaps "Sorrowful" does not know that the Long Island convention of Episcopalians indorsed Hamilton Fish's joint resolution 269 urging the President be requested to call a conference of all the signatories of the Kellogg-Briand pact to carry out its underlying purposes.

Does he know that if Congress had adopted the resolution, Japan would not have attacked China and that the President would not have been obliged to ask Congress for $500,000 to rescue Americans from China?

Does "Sorrowful" realize that the Kellogg pact, ratified by the Senate by vote of 85 to 1 and by the platforms of both parties in 1932, is as much the foreign policy of the United States as the Monroe Doctrine, and that our President is an Episcopalian?

The chief difficulty is that most of the members of Congress and our Episcopalian President seem to put duty to their party organization above that to the Constitution, to our country and to God.

Religious leaders are generally convinced that no one religious group can bring God control to purify the political system.

May I say to "Sorrowful" that we Episcopalians can do our best work by co-operating with all sincere lovers of God to induce our American President to yield to God's control by enforcing the foreign policy of the United States.

Tribute To Mr. Farley.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I don't believe there is a man in public life that as many mean things have been said about him as have been said about James A. Farley.

And it's a true saying that most every successful man in his line creates jealousy. Mr. Farley, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has managed the two most successful campaigns which were ever known in the history of the United States, and here is what John D. Rockefeller, jr., said about him: "I have never heard a chairman of a national campaign say as kindly words about the opposition party and those who managed it as James A. Farley said." This from a Republican.

Here's what the President of the United States, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, said: "I have known Mr. James A. Farley, or Jim Farley, for several years. I never heard him say an unkind word of anyone."

Solomons Island.

THE island, which on a map resembles a fat foot with a thin ankle, is in latitude 38° 19' N. and longitude 76° 27' W., and the navigator can make it either by boat or bus.

Once upon a time the islanders existed through the summer on what they earned in the winter; now they live through the winter on what they make in the summer—a near-epigram voiced by a seasoned old salt who sat on a pier and scrubbed a motor starter (too well seasoned with salt) with kerosene.

He further opined that in a very little while the island would be a rendezvous for thousands of the world's most earnest hobbyists; which was his way of saying that the first annual Solomons Island regatta, under the auspices of the Solomons Island Yacht Club, sanctioned by and conducted under the 1937 rules of the American Power Boat Association, would be held August 21 and 22, with the outboards racing on Saturday and the inboard craft on Sunday. (See sporting pages.)

Our retired sea captain touched lightly on great truths, and when he spoke of "hobbyists" he spoke with intimate authority. After 35 years of sailing the seas he has a comfortable pension and can sit on his porch and smoke and twiddle his thumbs if he wants to, instead of which he wears old clothes and tinkers with machinery. He is going to view and enjoy the regatta from an angle the committee chairmen are far too busy to consider. For sailing a motorboat provides only one-tenth of the enjoyment a motorboat owner knows. The other nine-tenths he gets from tinkering.

The other truth our sea captain lightly touched upon was later elaborated by another man, Capt. William E. Northen, an expert on oyster culture, recently become a member of the State Conservation Commission. Seated on the porch of his home in Solomons, Capt. Northen graphically recited some of the history of Solomons Island, a story here considerably condensed.

When Mr. Solomon arrived at the island early in the 60s the place was known as Jackson's Island and there was only one house there; so Mr. Solomon built another and established an oyster packing plant, and saw houses spring up around him. He opened a store and the store became a postoffice, and the postoffice was known as Solomon's. He thrived; extended his business; became a victim of the law of diminishing returns, and passed out. But he left a fairly thriving community bearing his name.

A New England firm took hold of the business, with Tom Moore, a Marylander, having a third interest. To the oyster business Moore added shipbuilding. That business still thrives. They don't build Queen Marys at Solomons, but some of the big yachts the shipyards turn out are worth looking at, and they're seaworthy, which is what counts; seaworthy as the bugeyes and schooners of the early days.

Capt. Moore owned a large fleet of oyster boats. Capt. Northen sailed one of them, paying Moore a percentage of his profits. He bought oysters at Solomons and sold them at Batlimore. That's a bald statement of fact concealing several million bushels of romantic human interest.

And the oystermen? They had good years and bad years, with the bad years growing more numerous. It became increasingly hard to live through the summer. They were the victims of wasteful habits. They "were taking everything out and putting nothing back."

The next step should normally have been conservation, but that was still some little distance off. What happened was that some visitors caught quite a lot of fish on a summer's day and told their friends about it. And the visitors grew more numerous in succeeding summers and the island folk made preparations for them. Fishing boats were built to take out "parties." Piers were built for the fishing boats. Bars and restaurants and boarding houses sprang up, and in a few short years a fishing village became a summer resort.

But, that, of course, is not the whole story. It is only two-thirds of it. There is another change due. While it will continue to delight the summer vacationist, Solomons will develop a culture all its own. That change was indicated when Maryland first became conservation-conscious. An important stage in that change was the establishment in Solomons of a laboratory for marine research.

* * * *

Ay, Solomons is due to know prosperity and culture. But in the meantime it is a place for good wholesome fun. There are fish to be caught and races to be run. And not all are motorboat races. Standard Oil crews have been doing practice rowing twice a day for six or seven weeks past and in September up in New York they will show the English and the Scandinavians how to pull a lifeboat. There's lots of things going on in Solomons.

Baton Rouge Comparison.

SOME OF US wouldn't be much surprised to learn that Mr. Roosevelt and some of his little friends and coat-holders are cross at those members of Congress who placed a limitation on the so-called mandate of the last election and have refused to go along with him in every dictatorial proposal sent up to the Hill.

But it is only necessary to go back a very short time to the days of Huey Long's mock legislature in Baton Rouge, La., to see what sort of national government we would have if the election returns had been interpreted as a flat indorsement of every idea that might pop into Mr. Roosevelt's mind, or the mind of any of his political brownies, in whatever form presented.

Under Huey Long the State Legislature represented a useless waste of money, for he strode through both chambers giving orders like a football coach putting the squad through signal practice. But that was majority rule.

A national Congress reduced to a similar state of docility would amount to the same thing, and if that is the will of the people expressed in the election returns there is no point in paying for all that mileage, printing and office help.

• • • •

RELIEVED OF Huey's sarcastic opposition since the gun-play in the corridor, Mr. Roosevelt has more and more openly copied Huey's style of operation.

Like Huey, he has used the power of his office to punish and worry his political opponents, and, again like Huey, he takes special privileges for himself and his family and friends, as in the income tax inquiry. In that case the details of the President's own income was held to be a private matter, and anyone who might have been curious to know just how much money Jim or Elliott has made, and precisely how, since their father became President is still wondering.

As for nepotism, one son is dropped into a good job in the secretariat, a cousin-in-law gets a $6,000 job and expenses, traveling around the world hanging chintz curtains in the embassies, and a cousin more or less removed turned out to be just the man to handle the politico-social problems of the grog business at $100,000 a year.

Huey got a taste of his own medicine when the national Administration had some of his men indicted for alleged violation of the income tax laws, and his own political morals were observed again when, upon his death and the surrender of his survivors to the New Deal, the remaining indictments were dropped. That case was the tip-off and a disillusionment to many early believers, for it showed that the Administration occupied a common level of political honesty with the man who had been recognized as a cynical and ruthless scoffer at political and civil rights.

But it was in the Legislature that Huey was at his worst, and it would seem that Mr. Roosevelt's friends would like to claim for him the same right to clap his hands, yell, "Hey, you!" and put the dummies through the motions of voting yes.

Huey, of course, liked to mill around among the crowds and invade the floor, and his opinion of his legislators was expressed in the memorable declaration that he could buy and sell them like sacks of potatoes. He, too, professed to be progressive, the poor man's friend and the enemy of the rich.

He was so progressive that he impaired the freedom of the courts in Louisiana, used the tax laws for political coercion, rigged the election laws so that the opposition would have no chance, established a State OGPU to spy on his enemies, tried to abolish the freedom of the press and declared that he would kick out of the State University any dirty little—— who dared to say a word against Huey Long.

• • • •

MR. ROOSEVELT tried to pack the Supreme Court, he smeared with an unsupported charge of immorality opponents who later were admitted to have complied with the laws, and has taken the line that anyone elected under his so-called mandate is bound to obey as humbly as Huey's legislators did.

If that is what the mandate of the majority meant, the the President, like Huey, is a one-man government, and anyone elected with him is a traitor for voting against any proposal from the White House, even though it might call for the suppression of free speech.

True, Mr. Roosevelt doesn't hang around the halls of Congress, but his presence is no less real, for it isn't far from the Hill to the White House, and he has no trouble making his wishes known. The only difference between Congress and Huey's Legislature is that there is some independence, opposition and perhaps a little conscience in Congress. If those disappear after the next election the national Government will be Louisiana multiplied by 48.

The Piano's Comeback.

A very significant and encouraging piece of news came over the wires the other day. It reported the piano makers and dealers of America to be optimistic. We haven't seen a smile on a man in the piano business since Von Kluck and his left wing.

• • • •

About the worst you could wish a fellow during the last 20 years has been a job selling pianos.

• • • •

They had gone with the wind, the stereopticon lecture, the trained-seal act, the pug dog and the woolen petticoat. You still found them in American homes, but nobody seemed to know what they were for.

• • • •

They had been in the family for two or three generations and were regarded as heirlooms too hard to play and too heavy to give away.

• • • •

But what was home without a "pianner" in the pre-radio days? No home was thought to be decently equipped until it had one, the bigger the better. There were families that kept on paying installments all their lives.

• • • •

The reason so many people spent all their lives in one dwelling in the old days was due entirely to the piano. They shuddered at the herculean task of transporting it to a new house.

• • • •

If you lived on the ground floor and had a piano you might decide to move without misgivings, but if you lived on the second floor, the mere thought of all that fuss of taking out the windows, putting hooks into the roof and letting the piano dangle in midair all afternoon was flabbergasting.

• • • •

And as for third floors, once a family with a piano got up that high it was hooked for life.

• • • •

Everybody took piano lessons. Little Alice was always expected to play "Hearts and Flowers" when mother had company, and when you called on any girl, she made it a point to stall you off by a little terrible music until you either married her to get rid of piano music or left her to her instrument and her fate.

• • • •

Radio knocked the piano in the head and if you opened a piano in the average home during the past decade, mice scampered out. But the reaction against depending on the networks for everything has set in. And what is more important, the manufacturers have abandoned the old five-tonner and are producing a streamlined piano that can be moved without calling for the fire department.

• • • •

The piano parking problem has been solved. And that's why the situation looks hopeful.

"Cantor Named Head of Radio Union."—headline. The "eyes" have it.

Few telegrams were sent to the Senate against Senator Black's appointment to the Supreme Court, probably because of a fear the Senator would open 'em first.

Paris Letter

Correspondent Reports Chautemps' 'Truce' Has Meant No Cessation Of Activity Among Leaders Charged With French Recovery.

By Jacques Kayser.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

AS A RULE the month of July in France is divided in two: before the 14th there is a general winding up of all political business; after the 14th, the political world goes on vacation. This year might have been presumed to have been the same as any other in spite of the Chautemps government's declaration of a "truce." But it did not work out this way. July has been a very busy month from every point of view. Just as England's statesmen have often recently been forced to give up their accustomed week-ends, French leaders have shown their mettle by renouncing their usual summer vacations.

President LeBrun planned to leave for a few days in quiet, little Mercy le Haut, his home town in Lorraine. But before he left it was agreed that he would return to preside over the cabinet unless the ministers could arrange to meet with him out in the country.

Why this activity? Because the Chautemps government has received from Parliament plenary powers to issue economic and financial decrees. These extraordinary powers expire on August 31. Accordingly, until then the government may proceed without thought of Parliament. Before that date, it must settle on its recovery program for France.

Georges Bonnet Leading Efforts Toward Recovery.

IT HAS, indeed, already taken considerable steps toward this end under the forceful leadership of its new Minister of Finance, Georges Bonnet. His first concern was the budget. In an effort to bring it into balance, he provided the treasury with new funds amounting to approximately 8,000,000,000 francs—this by the first set of decrees issued July 9.

These new resources will be raised by four means. First, are measures against fraud and bankruptcy which will provide 425,000,000 francs. Next, tax increases, notably on large fortunes and personal property, which will bring in 250,000,000 francs. Third, a reallocation of customs receipts coupled with a promise for the reform of the entire customs system which will account for more than 1,000,000 francs. And finally, a rise in taxes on consumers, particularly a boost from 6 to 8 per cent on production levies, an increase on the highway transportation taxes (this should benefit the railroads whose deficits are charged against the state) and higher charges for mail, telephone, telegraph and tobacco—the last of which is a government monopoly in France.

In spite of the burden of these increases, the nation has accepted them without a murmur, convinced of their necessity. It is interesting to note that neither the Communists nor the Fascists have seized on the occasion to stir up trouble, demonstrating that France is not ripe for civil war.

But the work of the government in the realm of economics and finance is far from finished. The problem is somehow to build solid foundations, but this is complicated by the fact that in the fall all efforts will be swamped by the maturing of the state's obligations. Georges Bonnet has dedicated himself to the task of reducing approaching interest charges. By decree, these have been lowered by 6,000,000,000 francs for the end of 1937 and by 25,000,000,000 francs for 1938.

Task Made Difficult By National Defense Program.

THE WHOLE TASK has been made all the more difficult because of the unanimous approval of the government for the continuation of the entire national defense program. It is agreed in hoping that an international accord may develop which will permit it to relax its re-armament efforts along with the other powers. But in the absence of such an accord, it finds itself unfortunately required to continue its military, naval and air programs.

The government is also working strenuously on new economic measures, notably for the benefit of the middle classes and for the complete reorganization of the railroads. These will be the subjects of decrees to be issued before August 31. And, coupled with the financial efforts, they represent one very good reason why the holiday season has brought no holidays in political circles at least.

There are other reasons, as well. One is the seriousness of the international situation. Another is the large number of purely political problems which have arisen.

A former French minister is one of the country's outstanding political writers—L. O. Frossard. In days gone by he was one of the leaders of the Socialist Party; today, having resigned from his party, he is one of the most active members of the Popular Front. Said he recently: "We newspapermen ought to thank the politicians for having raised so many questions at this time—these furnish us with excellent material for our vacation duties."

What are these problems? The first is that of the relation between the Socialist Party and the Popular Front government. At its Marseilles convention, the Socialists concluded by approving of the participation of its members in the Chautemps government. But it did so half-heartedly, with many reservations and only because Leon Blum begged for the action. In these circumstances, many observers think that the support of the Socialists will last only until the fall. But, in a speech delivered at Tours, Leon Blum, who is vice president of the cabinet, declared that the agreement between the Socialist Party and the government was firm and absolutely without qualification. Will he, as leader of the Socialists, be followed by his legions? The answer depends on three factors.

Socialists Restrained Bn International Outlook.

THE FIRST is the development of the international situation. As long as it continues menacing, the Socialists will hesitate to provoke a cabinet crisis which would weaken France.

The second is the reaction of the Radical Party to the proposals made by the Socialists. The latter, at its convention, demanded a broadening of the Popular Front. In particular, it asked for a limitation of the powers of the Senate, which would imply a revision of the Constitution, and for the nationalization of certain important industries, which would require a considerable social reorganization. The Radical Party, of which Camille Chautemps is a leader, has decided to examine these suggestions at its national convention scheduled for the end of October. But speeches made thus far by other leaders of the party indicate that there will be no acceptance of the proposals without considerable modifications.

The third factor is the reaction of the Socialist Party to the insistence of the Communists for an immediate merger of the two parties, thus creating a single group representing the proletariat. Thus far the Socialists have not seemed inclined to undertake this unification which would end the Popular Front while tending to divide France into two camps: the workingman's forces and the rest of the nation.

Here, then, are the serious problems which arose during July in France and for which the months to come hold the answer. While the government has been strenuously reminding the country that it is necessary to continue "the truce," politics have known nothing of a "truce." And France, which wants no revolution, without realizing it has just experienced one: even during a "truce" there have been no vacations for its politicians.

Mellon Too Feeble To Leave House, Family Discloses

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 20 (AP).—Andrew W. Mellon, who has been ill since early summer, has become too infirm to leave the home of his son-in-law, David E. K. Bruce, a member of the household said today.

Mellon's condition was said to be due to his advancing years. The aluminum magnate was 83 last March.

"Mr. Mellon is perfectly comfortable," the informant said. "But he has become too feeble to leave the house. There is no truth in reports he is critically ill."

In Shanghai

By

Felix Morley

Extracts From A Diary.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, January 27 (1926), found the Yohyang near the confluence of the Whangpoo and the Yangtze, the latter stream now perhaps 5 miles in width and thickly dotted with junks. Most of these are decorated at the bows with ferocious carved and painted eyes, indicative of the national love of humor and fantasy. Through a squadron of four small but neat-looking Chinese gunboats, lying at anchor and probably wondering what, if any, government they serve, our little steamer swung into the Shanghai River.

After a few miles the river narrows and the fields give way to countless warehouses and docks along the low-lying banks. As the massive granite banks and offices along the Bund loom into view one realizes how greatly Shanghai differs from the usual Chinese city, and realizes it the more strongly by coming here for the first time from the interior, as I have done.

Excepting such aspects as the fleets of junks and sampans, this is not China—this great bustling modern port with merchant ships from all the seven seas at anchor in the river, and a whole fleet of foreign warships lying in grim impressiveness at easy call. And yet the clumsy junks, the swarms of Chinese along the Bund, are not the incidental matters they seem at first. After all, the majesty of Shanghai is built by Chinese labor, is maintained by China's purchasing power. It would be well for the foreigners of this great city if they realized this as clearly as the Chinese are now beginning to do.

Our dock is at Pootung, across the river from Shanghai proper, and thence after the delays which are normal in China, a launch takes me over to the customs jetty on the Bund—customs by courtesy, for there is absolutely no examination to be gone through. Sitting on my trunk of Peking purchases, I wish that extraterritoriality could be in force at New York when I return.

• • • •

AFTER A WEEK of observation, I conclude that I do not like Shanghai. In part, my unfavorable impression comes from the indeterminate character of the International Settlement, which is neither truly Occidental nor truly Oriental, but a meaningless combination of much of the worst in both. The Indian policemen in the streets, with their rifles hung ready over their shoulders, do not seem picturesque to me, but rather like members of an army of occupation. The comparison is easy because of the obvious fear of these bearded warriors in which the Chinese live. Nor is the American Club, where I am staying, at all appealing. Except for its splendid library and its even more splendid bar, the whole character of the building is reminiscent of a purposeful Y. M. C. A. in (say) Detroit.

One of my ambitions in Shanghai was to study the famous Mixed Court, and there the morning after arrival I went with Howard Bucknell of our consulate. After attending both civil cases under an American assessor and criminal cases under one of British nationality, I find it difficult to be convinced that this is a satisfactory institution, certainly not for rendering justice in strictly Chinese cases. The hearings seemed fair enough and the sentences were just so far as I can tell. But the whole atmosphere, from the Sikh policemen up to the foreign assessor, is throughout one of alien domination. And Shanghai, however much its foreign residents may regret the fact, is not likely to remain the alien colony which the operation of this court tacitly assumes.

• • • •

THAT AFTERNOON, a raw chilly day said to be typical of Shanghai weather, I visited the old Chinese city with W. E. Dunn. There I came to understand better why people with the artistic leanings of the Dunns consent to live in what seems to me the degenerate atmosphere of Shanghai. The narrow lanes of little shops with craftsmen of every kind at work in the interior while a placid proprietor smokes a philosophic pipe at the door, are just as picturesque as in Peking. The architecture is even more riotous, the eaves much more speckled with tutelary demons and the ridge poles more inclined to take the form of dragons or other imaginative designs.

We had tea in a house which has been owned for generations by the same merchant guild. In its garden, cut off completely by a high stone wall from the teeming life around, there is a charming little goldfish pond made to represent a lake surrounded by miniature mountains, which are really rockeries covered with ferns and trailing plants. Lovely at the end of January, this must be beautiful beyond description when the flowers are in bloom around the winding walks and the birds are singing in the willow trees and shrubs so carefully placed to carry out the illusion of spaciousness in a tiny inclosure.

This glimpse of old Shanghai was the more interesting by contrast with the International Settlement and the adjacent French Concession. It seems another world to pass from the Chinese city into Bubbling Well road, walk by the huge Race Track with its flaunting British flags and then down the busy Europeanized Nanking road to the spacious, handsome Bund.

From the little municipal water-front park, across Soochow Creek with its litter of sampans, is a majestic view of the shipping in the bend of the narrow river. This park, incidentally, represents one of the sore points in the slowly developing Shanghai problem. Here it was, they tell me, that in the old days was displayed the sign : "Chinese And Dogs Not Admitted." Now the wording is more discreet: "These gardens are reserved for the foreign community."

I wonder how long that reservation will hold good.

A New Language

By William Lyon Phelps

'Basic.'

I have just received a letter from Ralph D. Jarvis, of Ocean City, N. J., enclosing a copy of an article published in one of the current year's "Modern Literature," and requesting me to comment thereupon in this column. He adds: "When I read the article (Modern Literature, Unit IV—The Dictionary, 1936-1937) I was reminded of a statement made by Dr. Robert C. Horn, of the Greek department of Muhlenberg College, when I was an undergraduate there, the more you spread education, the thinner it gets.

• • • •

From Modern Literature, Unit IV, 1936-1937.

What is Basic?

British-American-Scientific-International - Commercial . . . Basic, in short. Basic is a simplified English vocabulary of 850 words which has been developed by Prof. C. K. Ogden, of Cambridge, England. He chose words in everyday use, in order to get a working vocabulary that could reach great masses of people throughout the world. A non-English speaking person can master Basic in about 30 hours.

English is now used for all kinds of international communication. It is the language of more than 500,000,000 people. Simple Basic will make English even more popular. Basic had already been used for reports in international scientific meetings.

Representatives of Basic are teaching in 25 countries. The system had been indorsed by men like John Dewey, Julius Huxley, H. G. Wells, G. B. Shaw, Franklin's "Papers," "Gulliver's Travels" and two scientific books by Haldane have been translated into Basic.

• • • •

This seems to me terrible. I don't mind if they put modern scientific books into Basic or into anything else, but to put the glorious prose of Gulliver's Travels into anything else in English, seems to me something for which at this moment I can find no words fit for publication; though if I knew Basic, I might be able to express my sentiments.

Tom McCarthy

Roving Reporter in Hollywood.

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 18.—You can't very well open a conversation with Marlene Dietrich by asking, "Lady, how about my washing the dishes tonight, in exchange for a meal?" That simply isn't done in Hollywood. And yet, the habits of two months on the road are hard to shake off.

TOM McCARTHY.

It's very embarrasing, you know, to walk about a movie lot, ducking every time you hear a whistle, because you think the freight is about to go under a bridge. People don't understand that.

The big crisis, however, came out at the Paramount lot when the young fellow came in and said, "Your car is waiting, Mr. McCarthy."

"Eh, what's that?" I said, wondering all the while if I should ask the driver outright for a "lift up the line," or merely get out on the curb and point a meaningful thumb toward the city.

• • • •

"Sure, sure," I said, "I'll be right out."

"Okay, Mac," I warned myself, "take it easy. Don't try to hitch a ride on the tire rack. Climb right in and sit down. Relax. Pretend this is the most natural thing in the world. Don't be embarrassing to Mr. Blair and Mr. del Valle, just because they've given you a studio car to ride around in. Walk right in and sit down. No! On the seat! What will people think if they see you sitting on the floor, telling the chauffeur. 'OK, 'boe, you can let 'er go!' Remember this is Hollywood"

The funny thing is that you can easily forget that you're in the movie capital of the world unless you go right out to Hollywood, and then go into the studios. Los Angeles, itself, has little to remind you of where you are.

It's simply a sprawling, shapeless city of a million and a half population, loosely spread over better than 400 square miles. It has a diverse and unassimilated population, the worst architecture in the world and, contrary to the popular notion, comparatively little night life.

• • • •

THE TIME MAY have been when Los Angeles rated its reputation for nocturnal dissipations, but now it is undergoing the cleansing, if discomforting fever of reform. After the 2 o'clock closing hour, its streets lack even such spectral animation as you might expect to find in ghost towns. Faint signs of life may be observed in certain of the livelier spots along about midnight, as a yawning barman slowly raises a hand to wipe the "sleep" from his eyes.

Such, indeed, is the seriousness of the situation that one of the town fathers has been quoted as being worried lest the spread of Los Angeles' reputation for peace and order frighten away an anticipated conclave of the American Legion. That this civic gentleman has good reason for alarm was demonstrated to my satisfaction on my first night in the "city of the angels."

Four reporters, endeavoring to show me Los Angeles night life, gave up in vain after a fruitless hour of driving about the town, and apologetically set me up to a late coffee, after failing to find even a player piano, which might remove their stigma as residents of an absolutely "quiet town."

But if Los Angeles and its insulated night life scarcely measures up to the popular conception of "high times," in the movie capital, a trip into a studio out in Hollywood is more than compensation. The movie addict won't find any "high life" at the studio, but he will find hard working and often perspiring stars in such profusion that said addict won't even have a chance to stand up, stretch and say, "I think this is where we came in."

• • • •

EVEN IF YOU'RE not a movie addict, I expect you've had a hankering at times to know if Bob Burns is just as funny off screen as he is on or if John Barrymore carries himself with that same "grand manner" when the camera faces the other way.

After strolling around the Paramount lot, watching the shooting of scenes for a half a dozen pictures and talking with dozens of the performers, I've come to the conclusion that some carry their screen characterizations over into real life or, possibly, it's the other way around. For others are as far removed from the characters they play as are Berlin and Moscow.

Over in the "tank," where they are shooting scenes for Cecil B. DeMille next "super-colossal," I met Akim Tamiroff, whom you probably remember for his characterization of the "General" in "The General Died at Dawn," which starred the lanky Gary Cooper.

On screen Tamiroff is not only a tough-looking hombre, of the most villainous dye, but his reputation as a one-time performer in the Moscow Art Theater leads you to expect an off-screen character possessed, at the least, of a carry-over of the temper he so convincingly demonstrates before the camera.

• • • •

"THAT'S TAMIROFF," Johnny del Valle told me.

I turned, expecting to see a combination Svengali and Frankenstein. Tamiroff proved to be a pleasant-faced, stubby little man, whose association with the Moscow art group has proved no bar to his wearing his hat on the back of his head and favoring an unbuttoned double-breasted coat, which gaped open to reveal what in times past were known as "galluses."

A portrayer of screen villains, Tamiroff has the casual friendliness of the corner grocer, as his eloquent hands assist him in answering your questions.

"Villains? These characters I play? I like them. But sometimes it is hard, as you would not expect. In 'The General Died at Dawn' my eyelids blistered here from the make-up as an Oriental." A graceful finger traced the surface of his eyelid.

"In this part in 'The Buccaneer,' I must wear such make-up and clothes that, at the end of the day, I am too tired to speak. But I like these parts, these characters. I lose myself in them. They are, you might say, a release. And then, when I see the play, I can enjoy watching the character I have made. If it were just me in these clothes I would say ——" Mr. Tamiroff gestured and gave the Moscow art version of the Bronx cheer.

"But, when I am in character," he continued, "I can watch that peculiar fellow up there on the screen. I can tell what is right and wrong in him. He is you might say . . . to me . . . a stranger!"

Activities

Willard H. The Interior Department has announced an expedition that sets off on September 10 for the mysterious Shiva Temple—a spot of earth where man has never been—in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado . . . Soon will come many applications from would-be explorers who want to make the trip . . . It always is that way when the Government announces an expedition . . . And officials have said that it is very bothering. . . .

Skullduggery

Department of Labor Local No. 12, U. F. W. A., writes about an alleged piece of skullduggery at the bulletin board: "We hope Local 12 members have, by now, become accustomed to looking for notices of local activities in the lower left-hand corner of the bulletin board instead of the upper right.

"This space reallocation took place after the mysterious disappearance of our notices for a short period and their subsequent mysterious reappearance much damaged and crumpled. Our notices were removed and apparently thrown awdy by a representative of Lodge 228 without so much as a 'by your leave' and without informing our local in any way.

"Although this can hardly be construed as a friendly gesture from a fellow lodge, the episode in itself is not particularly significant. What is important to the department as a whole is what the various unions can report in terms of accomplishment, not where they hang their notices." . . .

Quotas

Eleven States and the District of Columbia are listed by the Civil Service Commission as in excess of quota . . . The States are Missouri, Vermont, Massachusetts, Utah, Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, Washington, North Dakota, Virginia and Maryland . . . Examinations have been announced by the Civil Service Commission, as follows: Instructor of weaving ($2,000), Indian Field Service, including Alaska—closing date, September 13; safety instructor ($1,800); assistant safety instructor ($1,600), Bureau of Mines, Department of Interior. . . .

Pretty soft: The reference is to the "agreement" between the U. F. W. A. and the Social Security Board to effect that when the temperature rises beyond the 94-degree mark the employes may go home . . . Should work of emergency nature be at hand, the rule would not be effective . . . Just off-hand, this seems one of the sweetest concessions a union ever has gained. . . .

No date has been fixed for the release of the President's statement to the N. F. F. E. national convention in Springfield next month, it was said yesterday at the national office . . . The President has promised to enlarge on his recent expression of attitude on Federal unions, and it is understood that N. F. F. E. President Steward is soon to confer with Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries on a day for release of the paper . . . Copies will be sent to all national Federal unions, but Steward is expected to have the chance of releasing it to his convention. . . .

Tsk! Tsk!

One Interior Department employe comes in to report that the main lobby of the new building is not air-cooled and terribly uncomfortable upon employes and the visiting public . . . This is duly printed . . . Immediately thereafter other Interior employes come in to say "shame upon you for casting an ugly look at our new building," and otherwise to defend the lobby, which, they say, is not too hot at all . . . We will print nothing more about that lobby. . . .

Whatever became of that suit the A. F. G. E. instituted sometime ago against another Federal employe group?

History

A history of the labor movement in the Government departments is being written by John P. Simpson, of Lodge No. 349 (Bureau of Motor Carriers), A. F. G. E. . . . He would like to receive any information you may have regarding the records of early lodges . . .

The Federal Government notes that the farmers' hens have been on an egg-laying spree during the last four months . . . Agriculture economists said that during the period there have been more eggs per hen than at any time in the 13 years that the Government has been keeping the record . . . The average 100 hens on farms this month produced more than 40 eggs daily, compared with 36 last year, a long-time average of 37 and previous highs of 38 eggs daily . . . The record-breaking production was credited to large hatchings and the drought of last year . . . Farmers, it was said, sold hens which were poor layers when the drought shot feed prices skyward.

President Vetoes Deputy Marshals' Increase in Pay

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday a bill which would have increased minimum salaries of deputy United States marshals to $2,000 a year. He said he did so because of the condition of the budget and that he opposed preferential treatment.

The President declared the question of pay of marshals may be submitted annually for consideration in the budget estimates and that individual salary adjustments may be made administratively by the Attorney General. Mr. Roosevelt vetoed a House bill authorizing a Marine hospital in Florida on the ground "there is no emergency need."

Il Duce Pledges Italy to Peace in Talk to World

Will Not Permit Bolshevism on Mediterranean, He Adds in Broadcast.

By the Associated Press.

Palermo, Sicily, Aug. 20.—Premier Mussolini, addressing a world-wide audience, pledged Italy today to "a concrete policy of peace."

The premier's speech from the waterfront of this Mediterranean port, where more than 200,000 Sicilians crowded to hear him, proclaimed Italy's peaceful intentions.

His only warlike note—"We will not tolerate bolshevism or anything like it in the Mediterranean"—was an afterthought, inserted when the crowds yelled at him to comment on the Spanish situation.

Proclamations in every principal city of Italy had summoned Fascists to public squares. Hundreds of thousands in Rome, Milan, Turin, Genoa, Florence and other cities lined up before batteries of loudspeakers in central squares.

Italy, the white-uniformed premier shouted from a towering 30-foot tribune, "is disposed to give its collaboration on all problems touching the political life of Europe."

He summarized Italian policy with an "appeal to peace to all countries which are touched by the Mediterranean where three continents have brought their civilization."

But, he warned, if his appeal is unheeded, "we will be perfectly at ease because Fascist Italy has such force, both morally and materially, she can face and deal with any destiny."

Although Il Duce said he "detested" Great Britain's "superficial and picturesque ideas" of Fascist Italy, he stressed his desires for friendship with Britain.

"I believe we can arrive at a lasting rapprochement," he said.

District Guard Ends Training; Returns Today

Judge Advocate, District National Guard.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Md., Aug. 20.—The District National Guard, its last regimental parade halted by rain, was ready tonight to leave by train on the return trip to Washington after a two-week encampment at Camp Ritchie.

The special train will pull out of the siding here at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow and is scheduled to arrive in Washington at 11:40. Most of the troops will ride on the train except for the quartermasters and some transportation units who will travel by trucks.

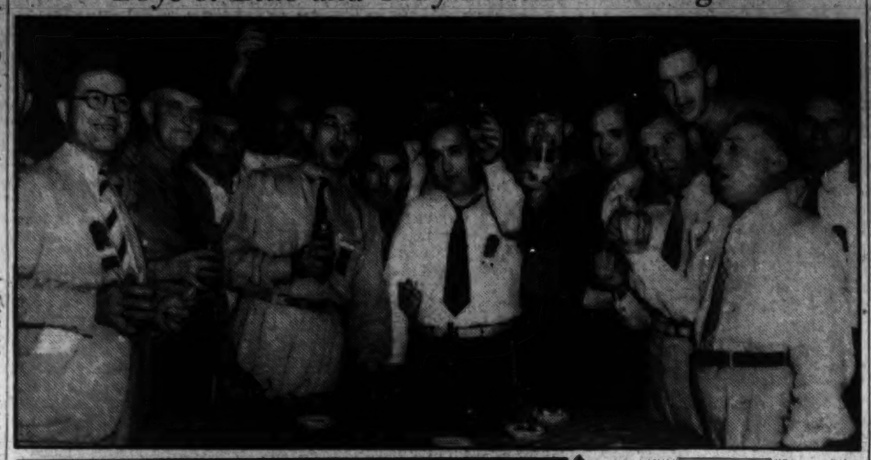

Arrival in Washington, however, will not be the end of the encampment period which began on August 7. The soldiers will proceed to the armory from Union Station, put up their equipment, pass inspection and draw their pay. After this, they may return home.

The last day in camp was spent in some military training, in a general clean-up and in a field day for the special troops which was won by the medical detachment under Lieut. James Bradley.

The summary of the events follow: Standing broad jump: Joseph Meyer, Benjamin Russel and Kenneth Ford. Running broad jump: Little, Russel and Ford. 100-yard dash: John Rizer, Charles Watson and Robert Smith. High jump: Joseph Pitcher, Rizer and Karl Rose.

The medical detachment won the 6-man relay, with headquarters company second, and military police third. The headquarters company took the volley ball title, while the medical detachment was adjudged winner of the track meet. The softball crown was taken by the Signal Corps.

U.S. Plans Buying To Aid Tomato Price

By the Associated Press.

Farm administration officials announced yesterday the Government would buy canned tomatoes in the next six weeks to increase returns to tomato growers, who are producing a record crop this year.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration said the Government-controlled Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation would ask bids on 12,000,000 cans of tomatoes in the six-week period beginning August 23.

F. R. Wilcox, AAA marketing executive, said purchases would be concentrated in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia, where "prices to growers have fallen to the lowest level."

SEC May Block New Power Stock

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission disclosed yesterday its experts are critical of securities proposed in connection with the reorganization of the Peoples Light & Power Co. of New York.

A hearing was called for September 15 when the company, its voting trustees and subsidiaries will be given an opportunity to show cause why they should be permitted to issue the securities.

Crowds Pay to See Idaho's Land Sink

Buhl, Idaho, Aug. 20 (AP).—It seems there are hundreds of people who are willing—even eager—to pay 50 cents to watch a farm drop.

So the residents of Idaho's "sinking canyon," dismayed two weeks ago when crop-laden acres crumbled and fell 250 feet, bustled about today to harvest tourist dollars from the hundreds of curious who flocked to the scene.

2 More Poles Die In Peasant Strike

Warsaw, Poland, Aug. 20 (AP).—The peasants' strike became more serious in Galicia today with the killing of two more farmers and the burning of farm houses.

Police shot the two farmers to death in disorders at Bochnia, near Krakow. Yesterday police fired volleys into a rioting mob at Dymow, killing four striking peasants.

James E. Smith Elected Head of Loyal Knights

District Man Honored at Closing Session of Round Table.

James E. Smith, chief of the National Radio Institute, yesterday was elected president of the Loyal Knights of the Round Table at the final business session of the convention at the Mayflower Hotel. Smith resides at 1333 Fairmont street.

After his election, Smith, who succeeds Homer C. Schaffmaster, of Detroit, pledged co-operation with Round Table clubs throughout the country in aiding the organization to grow.

Other officers chosen included S. A. MacDonald, of Norfolk, Va.; E. G. Spencer, of Birmingham, Ala.; H. W. Hammink, of Dayton, Ohio; A. W. Voorhees, of Tucson, Ariz., and Herbert E. Lee, of San Francisco, all vice presidents.

New members of the international board of directors include Henry Blume, Milwaukee; O. D. Brundage, of Dallas; George H. Clark, Calgary, Alberta, and S. P. Eccleston, of Detroit.

Following an address by Morris B. Knox, Oakland, Calif., delegate, the convention voted to hold its 1938 convention in the California city.

Smith, born in Rochester, N. H., in 1881, came to Washington in 1907. He introduced radio as a part of the course in applied electricity at McKinley High School in 1909. He was an instructor in steam and applied electricity at McKinley from 1907 to 1918. During the World War he was in charge of the radio instruction camp at Howard University. In 1914 he organized the National Radio Institute of Washington, D. C., of which he is president.

Crowd Turns Out To Cheer Walker's Return to City Hall

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Dapper as ever, former Mayor Jimmy Walker returned to City Hall today for the first time since his resignation and self-imposed exile abroad following the Seabury investigation in 1932.

Crowds surged around the jaunty little man who once wrote a song entitled, "Will You Love Me in December as You Did in May?" and they shouted:

"We want you back, Jimmy!"

"We're with you!"

The target of fiery criticism over his recent acceptance of an alleged "pension-grabbing" post as assistant counsel to the transit commission, Walker smiled and waved at the crowd. It took three policemen to rescue him from his admirers and escort him inside for his appointment with Mayor LaGuardia.

Annapolis to Be Heard On Harbor Improvement

A hearing on additional improvement of the Annapolis Harbor will be held Tuesday by the Board of Army Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, the War Department announced last night.

Officials said the report of the division engineer had been partially unfavorable. "The principal grounds upon which the adverse conclusions are based," the report said "are that breakwaters at the entrance to the Severn River are not economically justified and that the channel and anchorage basin provided under the existing project will make reasonably satisfactory provision for the needs of navigation."

Informal Party Opens Rally of 29th Division

'Blue and Gray' Veterans Also Tour City; Banquet Set Tonight.

For the evening the setting became the Cafe de la Paix to many of the veterans, the setting and the sight of old comrades brought back the illusion of brief moments of peace away from the front line.

Differences of rank were forgotten and the most prominent decoration worn by officers and men were their overseas caps, bearing the blue and gray division insigna.

Last night's gathering was held in advance of the formal opening of the Twenty-ninth Division convention, scheduled for 2 p. m. today. A meeting of the national executive committee will be held at 10 a. m., followed by sightseeing tours, with luncheon at 12:30 p. m.

A banquet and floor show will open this evening's program at 7:30, followed by a dance at 10 on the tenth floor of the Willard.

Memorial services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and the grave of Maj. Gen. Charles G. Morton, commander of the division during the war, who died four years ago.

The convention will close tomorrow with election of officers at 2 p. m. and showing of movies of the division taken in France.

Parran Finds Public Backs Syphilis Fight

U. S. Health Chief Reports Drive Gaining Strength in Midwest.

A syphilis "dragnet" through Washington similar to that being drawn in Chicago was considered possible yesterday by Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran, who has just returned from a month's survey of the syphilis campaign in the Western States.

However, he favors restricting the free confidential blood tests to the District's colored rather than including the entire population, because statistics show in advance that 75 per cent of the syphilis will be found among colored persons. He feels Washington should await the results of the Chicago experiment before taking the step, however.

"The fight against syphilis is moving out of the sphere of thought into one of definite action," Dr. Parran said. Everywhere he went he found increased public interest in the campaign.

Victims of venereal diseases are becoming more willing to report for diagnosis and treatment, doctors told him. In Denver, for example, the number of patients being treated in clinics and by private physicians more than doubled in the past year.

Dr. Parran believes a poll of Washington residents on their willingness to submit to a blood test would not be necessary. Chicago's poll showed 90 per cent in favor of the plan and in the Gallup Institute of Public Opinion, reported exclusively in The Post, an even higher percentage of the country's popultaion expressed the same sentiment.

In explaining why he would submit only colored persons to blood tests, he said 40 per cent of the District's population is colored and that everywhere syphilis is six times more prevalent among Negroes than among whites.

Therefore, in attacking the disease among the colored, health officials would be able to control three-fourths of the venereal cases in the city.

LINOTYPE SLUGS, carried through Mr. Farley's mail by little yellow tags bearing address and postage, announce the birth, on August 18, of a daughter, Jacquelin, to Frederick and Alice Fox Pitts. Jacquelin was born in Kennett Springs, Pa., near Wilmington, Del., where her father is now connected with the Journal Every Evening.

Her mother came to The Washington Post in 1934 from the Buffalo News, where she had been for some years. While living in the Capital she was an active member of the Women's National Press Club and took part in its stunt parties. Leaving here in 1936, she did publicity for the Republican National Committee in Chicago, and she is also secretary for the National Editorial Association.

Both she and Mr. Pitts entered the newspaper field via the Columbia School of Journalism which they attended at the same time. They have three other children, Patricia, who was a freshman at William and Mary College last year and will attend Pratt Institute this winter; Mark, who is in high school, and Bruno, who is just about ready for kindergarten.

• • • •

MRS. ELIZABETH SPRAGUE COOLIDGE is now in California, where she expects to remain until November or December after having spent part of the summer in Mexico. She sponsored the Pan-American Music Festival held in Mexico City in connection with its seminar on Mexico and awarded a prize of $500 for the best composition in chamber music submitted in a contest open to residents of any American country.

The winner was Jacob Ficher, of Argentina, on a composition entitled "Septima." Mrs. Coolidge presented the Coolidge String Quartet there in a series of concerts. The members are William Kroll, first violinist; Nicolai Berezowsky, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb, who give the winter concerts under the Coolidge Foundation at the Library of Congress.

THE VERY IDEA of people leaving Vacation Lodge to take extra vacations—and yet that's what they do. But they stay only a week or two and then come tripping back to their summer quarters to make believe the vacation has been a season-long one.

Vacation Lodge, as I hardly need explain, is the Y. W. C. A. summer residence for business girls at Cherrydale, Va. There are accommodations for 44 girls and 40 of them have been taken since the beginning of the season. The only time there is a shift in lodgers is when one of the girls leaves for a more distant vacation of a few weeks and a friend comes to take her room while she is away.

Dorothy Sharpless has just returned from a trip to Panama and has interesting accounts to give of her trip; Helen Spraker, who has been in New York State, is another who has just come "home." Maud Thompson is off today for two weeks in Maine; Mary Louise Brown is motoring with friends to the Gaspe Peninsula and Miriam Lermond is going to Virginia Beach.

• • • •

THERE is no dearth of entertainment for the summer residents while they are at Vacation Lodge, and yet there are plenty of secluded places where those who want perfect quiet can find it.

Every night the girls go for a hike through the woods on the 10-acre tract as soon as dinner is over. Sometimes they leave in one large party and, at others they go in smaller groups. Mary Louise Brown and Rose Malsky have been devoting care to their vegetable gardens, and have had tomatoes to share with the rest of the group. Miss Malsky also boasted a cornfield, but its size was not such as to warrant any great expectations in the line of roasting ears for her sister lodgers. She admits it's to be seen and not brought in by the ear.

Frances Nevins, Carla and Wanda Davis (who are not related to each other, by the way), Helen Spraker and Ruth Mulany have gone in for art of the decorative rather than the culinary variety in the matter of gardens. They have raised flowers only and have had such success as to be able to provide the rooms of the lodge with lovely bouquets almost daily.

Ping pong on the porch and tennis on the grounds draw enthusiasts for regular games but the croquet set has little patronage. Maybe it's because it is reminiscent of the gay 90's which don't seem so gay viewed from the summer of 1937; maybe it's the heat or that there are so many other things to do—but just nobody spends time playing good old croquet.

Woman Assails Action in China

Hannah Clothier Hull, national president of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, yesterday wired a protest to President Roosevelt against sending reinforcements to China.

"We deplore the presence of a single soldier or marine or war vessel of whatever class on Chinese soil or in Chinese waters," her message said. "We point out that the bombing of the United States flagship Augusta shows clearly that such vessels are focal points of disturbance capable of leading this country to acts of official violence, and we ask for their immediate withdrawal."

Mrs. Hull's protest was sent in the name of the United States section of the league, which is organized in 32 States and has members in all 48. The officers of the section include Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, one of the 24 members of Congress who signed a statement calling upon the Administration to apply the neutrality law, and upon Congress to remain in session to protect this country from any involvement in the Chinese-Japanese hostilities.

Newspaperwomen Give Melon Party

Mrs. Daniel Roper Provides Fruit for Club Fete.

Members of the Newspaper Women's Club last night participated in a watermelon party, for which the melons were provided by Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, who is an associate member of the club. The affair was given at the National Press Club as the Admiral, where the newspaper women maintain their headquarters, is being remodeled.

The melons were sent from the farm of David Coker, son-in-law of the Secretary and Mrs. Roper.

Responding Correctly.

As explained in earlier articles of this week, reverse bidding (showing the higher ranking suit) shows a strong hand, if partner may be compelled to choose between the suits at the level of three-odd. In general, the strength required for such bidding is about four honor tricks. The partner should rely on such a strong hand and should be encouraged to continue even though his own hand is not very strong. Typical of correct judgment by the responding hand after a reverse is North's raise of the spades in the hand below.

Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 N T	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Queen of clubs and declarer decided not to play dummy's King. West's Queen holding the trick, he continued with the Ace and Queen of spades, scoring the finesse. West won the Queen of spades with the King, but was now powerless to prevent declarer from scoring his game. If he led another club, South would trump and enter dummy with the Queen of hearts, to draw the last trump. Declarer would thus make five heart tricks and five trump tricks, and would concede one diamond trick at the end.

If West returned a trump, North's Jack would win, and the heart suit would be run for the discard of dummy's losing clubs. The Ace of diamonds could then be knocked out while dummy still had a trump to insure the cashing of a diamond trick.

Washington Soroptimist Club Will Celebrate Sesquicentennial of Constitution September 15

Harris & Ewing

Among the past presidents of the Soroptimist Club, which opens its season the second Wednesday in September, are, left to right, standing, Miss Ella C. Werner, Miss Nora Huffman, Mrs. Mary C. Lewis, and, seated, Mrs. Ruby Lee Minar, Miss Daisy Reed, who is now president, and Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, another past president.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Constitution Day will be observed by the Soroptimist Club, September 15, at its second meeting of the fall season. Although the date is two days earlier than that of the general celebration, it will mark the club's participation in the week's ceremonies which will inaugurate the sesquicentennial observance throughout the country.

The Soroptimists are having a summer recess but will open their season September 8, resuming their weekly luncheons at the Willard Hotel. Miss Daisy Reed is president of the club, which has been active in civic affairs since its organization 15 years ago.

Children's Hospital has been one of its chief interests, and the superintendent, Miss Mattie Gibson, is among its members. It has given beds for post-operative work, and last year bought a set of surgical instruments to remove foreign bodies from the nose, ear and throat. This is said to be the only set of such instruments in a hospital south of Philadelphia.

The Children's Emergency Home, of which Mrs. John F. Bennett is founder and superintendent, is another institution in which the club is interested. Mrs. Bennett is a Soroptimist. The club maintains a lodge built by the contributions of members at the summer camp opened by the home near Olney, Md.

Hospital Libraries Are Established

Other philanthropic activities have included the establishment of libraries at the Columbia Hospital; at the Women's Bureau, as a memorial to Mina Van Winkle, founder of the bureau and one of the early presidents of the club, and at the Glendale sanitarium for adults. Club members also have provided toys and clothes for children at Glendale.

The Soroptimists were the first to take membership in the Criminal Justice Association.

"Economic Advancement of Women" is the theme of the program for all clubs in the American Federation of Soroptimists, but each member group is left free to promote this end in its own way. Many have devoted their chief efforts to aiding the woman past 40 and out of work make an economic adjustment. The Washington club, however, has concentrated in helping young businesswomen and girls preparing to enter the business world.

One of its steps in this direction was the organization of the Venture Club three years ago, composed of businesswomen from 18 to 29 years. There are about 35 in the club, which has fortnightly meetings on Wednesday evenings. Each new member must be sponsored by a Soroptimist, and the senior club joins with the juniors in meetings twice or three times a year.

Vocational Guidance Is Carried On

Vocational guidance and assistance to young girls of ability who are preparing for business careers also has been one of the club's activities. In the membership are Mrs. Mary C. Lewis, of the Lewis Hotel Training School; Miss Marjorie Webster, of the Marjorie Webster School, and Mrs. Caroline Stephen, president and founder of the Temple School of Business, all of whom have worked with the club in interviewing girls and at times providing scholarships for those particularly worthy.

The Soroptimists, rather than scatter their activity, have carried it out on a consistent program, continuing projects from year to year. It is the plan to give a library to some institution each season. The club also contributes to the Community Chest and other civic enterprises.

It has a membership of 70 business and professional women. Miss Daisy Reed is the president; Mrs. Agnes Newman, first vice president; Mrs. Ruth Baker, second vice president; Mrs. Ella M. Hildebrand, recording secretary; Mrs. Paul B. Everhart, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Constance Fogle Jones, treasurer, and Miss Gene C. Bearmore, Miss Grace Goodpasture, rMs. Edna B. Hoffman, Mrs. Isabel M. Patterson, Mrs. Laura Waters, Miss Ella C. Werner and Miss Estelle Zirkin, directors.

Mrs. Bennett Likes Palestine

Motor Trip of Capital Woman Enlivened by Rifle Bullets.

"MOTORING THROUGH Palestine is hot work and exciting business," says Mrs. Russell Bennett, who returned August 18 from a Mediterranean cruise, which included Egypt and Asia Minor as well as the more everyday ports of call.

As member of an automobile caravan up through Palestine, she was a little taken aback when rifle shots drilled the top of the car ahead. There were British soldiers stationed grimly everywhere. And the mean average—very mean—of the temperature was somewhere around 146 degrees.

Creole Fried Chicken an Ideal Change

'Farm Dinner' Also Can Be Served Maryland or Southern Style.

By Rebekah Blake.

OCCASSIONALLY nothing can compete with a good old-fashioned "down on the farm" dinner. And, of course, fried chicken, with its proper accessories, should be the main feature of such a meal.

The local markets are well supplied with poultry and it is reasonably priced in comparison with other meats.

Ideal foods to serve with fried chicken are vegetables that are now on the markets at a low price. They may include any of the following: Corn fritters, corn on the cob, string beans, lima beans, sliced tomatoes, cucumbers, beets, rice or creamed potatoes, boiled okra, green peas, escalloped egg plant, buttered asparagus, celery, lettuce, cabbage pickle, cole slaw. Ice cream and cake, sherbert, watermelon, fruits, iced tea or coffee are other foods that are delicious with a chicken dinner.

If you want fried chicken to be superb instead of merely another piece of meat, consider carefully your method of preparation and cooking. There are sufficient diversified ways of frying chicken to please the taste of everyone from any section of the country. Those converted to Louisiana cooking will delight in "Fried Chicken a la Creole."

Fried Chicken a la Creole.

Two spring chickens, six large tomatoes, two large onions, two cloves of garlic, six fresh, sweet green peppers, two sprigs of thyme and parsley, a bay leaf, two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons flour, a pint of chicken stock or water, salt and pepper. Divide the chicken into joints and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Melt the butter in a saucepan and when hot put in the chicken and cook until golden brown on all sides. Slice the onions, add to the chicken and brown lightly. Sprinkle with flour, mix well and cook until the flour browns. Put in the sliced tomatoes, chopped garlic, herbs and sliced peppers and simmer for 20 minutes. Add the hot chicken stock or water, season highly with salt and pepper. Simmer for 45 minutes. Serve boiled rice with this.

Should you prefer chicken less highly seasoned than the creole style you might try it the Maryland way.

Chicken Maryland.

Two 3-pound chickens
1½ cups crumbs
2 egg yolks
3 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1-3 cup butter, melted
4 strips bacon

Thoroughly wash and clean chickens. Cut into serving pieces. Rinse in cold water and wipe dry. Dip in crumbs, then in yolks mixed with milk, and again in crumbs. Arrange in shallow well-buttered baking pan. Add salt, paprika and butter. Cover and bake one hour in a moderate oven. Turn several times to allow even browning. Remove cover and top with bacon. Bake until the bacon is crisp. Carefully remove to serving platter. (Gravy may be made from the drippings left in the baking pan.)

Perhaps the most popular method of frying chicken and the one that will be generally liked by a greater number of people is the old-fashioned Southern way.

Southern Fried Chicken.

2 cups soft wheat flour
4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon black pepper
2½ pound young chicken

Disjoint chicken. Mix dry ingriedients. Roll chicken in flour mixture until the pieces are thoroughly covered. Be careful to have no broken places in the coating. Place in a heavy frying pan of hot, shallow fat. Cover, cook slowly until tender; remove cover and brown. Place on brown paper, drain. Serve with corn fritters and gravy.

Here is a typical Southern dinner that is usually served with fried chicken.

Hot Biscuits Cabbage Pickle

Breakfront Book-Cases.

The breakfront bookcase is an excellent piece of furniture to lend dignity and interest to a room. Because of its height and its architectural character, it may well serve as the focus for a room which lacks a fireplace and become the outstanding piece about which other furniture is grouped. In pickled mahogany or pine, it introduces a striking accent in a room furnished in the traditional deep-toned mahogany.

Fried Chicken Dinner Tempts Appetites

Corn on the cob and iced tea are fitting accompaniments to this platter of old-fashioned Southern fried chicken platter. It is surrounded by corn fritters and garnished with parsley. It may be served for either luncheon or dinner.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

With Her Love Cooling, Girl Wonders If She Should Keep Promise to Marry Youth This Fall.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a 20-year-old girl, from a nice famliy, considered a good sport, have lots of nice friends, drive my own car, and for some time have been going with a boy five years my senior. He is a nice-mannered boy and has been paying me serious attention for almost a year. He has asked me to marry him this fall. At one time I was very much in love with him, but now my affection isn't as deep as it once was by a long way. My father likes this boy fairly well and my mother dislikes him.

* * * *

His parents always seemed to think a great deal of me, but a mutual friend of ours told me confidentially that they have sworn to break off the relationship and have their son stop seeing me. It seems they think I have a hair-trigger temper, or something. I confronted the boy with this rumor and he denied it. I told him if his parents didn't want him to see me, for him to stop coming right away. But he keeps on coming. He is very jealous and thinks I should never go any place unless he is along. I love sports, and he doesn't care much about them. We have had a number of quarrels since we started going together.

* * * *

Just because I have a car and plenty of money, his parents seem to think I should carry him every place we go. They have a nice car, too, but it seems to me, sometimes, that they are working me for all they can. I think it's the boy's business to take the girl out, don't you? Do you think I should be expected to furnish transportation? I am beginning to be very doubtful as to whether we should marry this fall. If I decide not to—and I would like your opinion in this matter—how should I break off with him? If we decide not to marry, do you think we should continue seeing each other? Or should we just speak and go our separate ways. Please advise me. UNDECIDED.

* * *

The Thing to Do.

DEAR UNDECIDED: This is an average case history of boy and girl romance that has run its course and is gradually dying a natural death. I most certainly don't think you should marry the boy this fall, for you are not in love with him. To use the vernacular, you are pretty well "fed up" on him, though you may not realize it yet. I believe you should tell him very soon now that you are not going to marry him, and suggest that it may be best for you not to see so much of each other in future, unless he is willing to be accepted as a friend and nothing more.

* * * *

I think it is a mistake for a girl to let herself be jockeyed into the position where she supplies the lion's share of transportation and amusement expenses when going out with a boy. The attitude a man takes toward a woman is pretty much of her own making. If she looks to him to be the provider, usually he will make a heroic attempt to meet her expectations, if he is at all interested in holding her good opinion. If she is too lavish with her hospitality, it implies that she is so eager for masculine attention that she is willing to pay for it.

* * * *

The traditional assumption—and a pretty good one to observe—is that the woman is more than repaying a man for whatever he spends on her by giving him the pleasure of her society. One hears it said on all sides that Washington bachelors are pretty badly spoiled by the over-eager attentions of predatory women, and I think it's a very clever girl who refuses to fall into that category.

* * * *

Once it is clearly understood between you that marriage has been called off, I believe you should start going out with other boys. It may or may not be necessary to stop seeing this boy altogether. It all depends on his attitude. If he threatens to make a nuisance of himself, by attempted interference with your comings and goings, tell him he has worn out his welcome. If, however, he adjusts himself to the situation, and concedes you full right to make your own decisions and live by them, there is no reason why you should deliberately avoid or ignore each other. By graceful handling, rejected suitors may sometimes be transformed into the most dependable and trustworthy of friends. Much depends, however, on the quality of character the man possesses. Some grow sullen and vituperative when rejected; others prove the measure of their fineness by taking the attitude that if it cannot be love, at least it can be an elevating friendship. M. H.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Wandering Substances.

The following news dispatch catches my eye:

"Twenty-three years ago, in Peru, Ind., a 3-inch steel needle was swallowed by a little girl. Recently the little girl, now a full-grown lady, became annoyed at a lump appearing on her thigh, and examination of the X-ray showed the needle. Under local anesthesia the lump was opened and the needle parted company with its host after nearly a quarter of a century of close association."

This business about wandering needles and pins and pieces of glass is regarded with great skepticism by most of my professional colleagues. I wonder whether Dr. Morris Fishbein is going to include any such cases in a book on the curiosities of medicine which he is compiling.

I know of one authentic case in which a small piece of glass did some wandering. A man had a splintered pane of glass dropped on the top of his bare foot. A number of pieces were taken out, but for nine years his foot was uncomfortable. Finally 2 inches from where the cut was made, up the tendon of the great toe, a small piece of glass made its way to the surface and was removed.

The prize case I have heard of is, I believe, well authenticated. A man for years complained of pains in his back. He consulted doctor after doctor to no avail. X-rays of his spine showed nothing. Then the pain in his back left and he began to have pain in his abdomen. Finally it got into his groin. Then he noticed a small red spot on the front of his leg which was opened by a doctor and a broken hypodermic needle was removed.

Then he remembered that more than 15 years before he had been given a hypodermic of serum to prevent tetanus, after he had cut himself with the prong of a pitchfork. The serum was inserted in the skin under the shoulder blade. While it was being given the doctor made an exclamation and said his hypodermic needle has broken off. But he didn't say that part of it had been left in the skin.

The needle had followed the lines of cleavage of the body—around the ribs to the spine, down the spine, then following the psoas muscle which goes from the spine to the front of the leg. A well-known form of abscess, called psoas abscess, which starts in the spine, may follow this course.

Cucumber Canape.

Canape note: Hollow out five-inch cucumbers. Stuff them with crab or salmon salad. Allow them to chill for an hour and then cut them into half-inch crossway slices. Place each slice, flat side up, in a tiny nest of lettuce.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 20.

THE GREAT PIGEON murder mystery is, as this is written, gripping the great metropolis by its collective throat, and no doubt the late Edgar Wallace is rolling in his grave and Dashiell Hammett is putting on a disguise.

ALICE HUGHES.

I've written here of the great flocks of fat, lazy, panhandling pigeons which strut about various localities in this town where the popcorn is plentiful. And the other day a famous uptown covey whose mooching ground was Seventy-second street and Broadway was foully done to death! The city was in an uproar and our most reticent newspaper gave the story a whole column. As this is written it remains a mystery, the killer unknown. At 11 one sunny morning the sky started raining decreased pigeons all over the neighborhood—over 70 were counted, and their friends called the police and the S. P. C. A., who came on the gallop.

Investigation disclosed that many neighbors liked and fed them, but that hundreds of complaints had been laid against them by hotels and apartment houses in the thickly populated area — and for obvious reasons. An autopsy showed that they had been done in by strychnine, and even a policeman could deduce that some fiend had scattered poisoned provender, which our feathered friends had trustingly snapped at. There were no clews—cops baffled, as it were—but some idiot told the sergeant that he had seen a mysterious little old lady in black scattering bait for them. I was infuriated. It couldn't have been a peppery old gent whose new gray fedora had been ruined. Oh, no—it had to be a little old lady! I would have wired my Congressman had I known his name. So this is our big August mystery: What local rat would poison 70 hobo pigeons? There are probably thousands—but which?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN. America's dream-man conductor and pianist, Jose (Joe) Iturbi, adored by thousands of music-loving ladies, certainly stirred up a ruckus over in Philadelphia when he refused to permit that great orchestra to sit patting its fiddles while a long group of popular songs were sung, but it isn't the first time his hot Castilian blood has boiled over. There was quite a shindy in Cleveland last year over a missing piano, or something, and a great gap on the radio—which the unhappy announcer employed to rhapsodize over the sunset on Lake Erie. Joe is a brilliant musician, and we all dote on him—but he is not what can be considered a good radio risk . . .

* * *

Our own outdoor music is 100 per cent placid. We have been reveling in a week of "The Gay Divorcee," with Fred Stone's daughter Dorothy and her husband, Charlie Collins, in the roles played on Broadway by Claire Luce and Fred Astaire, of Omaha and the world. I loved it because it gave me another chance at "Night and Day," to my mind, the loveliest and most popular song ever written. Cole Porter certainly had something there! . . .

* * *

The silly season has sprinted into high around these parts. A Whitehouse, N. J., girl wrote to the State Department of Agriculture asking whether a pig's tail should curl clockwise or counter-clockwise, and every farmer in the State has taken his pen in hand! It's a major controversy in ersey! Pooh—what's a Jersey pig, anyway? When it comes ot swine, I swear by the 4-ton underslung type I once saw when covering the Iowa State Fair. Never mind how long ago, either! So until I hear from Des Moines and surrounding territory on this cosmic subject, I maintain an aloof and open mind on the moot question of pigtail curls! . . .

Melvin Purvis, the former G-Man who nearly married beauteous Model Janice Jarratt, has been stopping silently at the Waldorf. He has written off the romance. "That's all over," he says. And, darn it, we've never known why?

* * *

A great local store hit on the cute stunt of giving (for free) an extra layette to all mothers who had purchased one and were then unexpectedly confronted with twins. Just save the sales check! My store spy reports that in the past year 69 such were presented. No trips, quads or quints were reported—though the store would love to pass out extra sets to such!

Meat Sauce.

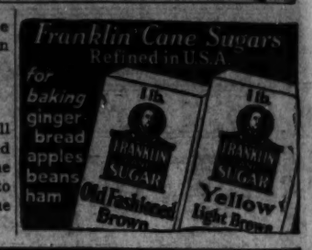

Currant jelly sauce is good served with beef, veal or lamb. Add half a cup of currant jelly to the drippings left in the roasting pan. The sauce may be served separately or may be poured directly over the meat.

Celery Substitute.

One-eighth of a teaspoon of celery salt may be substituted for three tablespoons of chopped celery in recipes requiring celery.

Glass Saves Woodwork.

A glass cut to fit the window sill upon which plants or flower-filled bowls are placed will save the woodwork. The glass is easy to wash and will not detract from the appearance of the room.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

To a plainsman from the open spaces, Washingtonians seem shackled with more regulations, ukases, dicta, ultimatums, rules and verbotens than the residents of any other American city . . . The only limiting factor is scarcity of room for more signs and placards . . . But since half the population ignores the regulations, the result is a draw.

* * *

Another type of statesman is the one who prefers a badly laundered shirt collar, to prove he is a man of the people . . . Capital lothario: Bearded old gent stopping pretty girls in a hotel lobby—a devil away from his own home town . . . At moments the House resembled a nursery yesterday, as members gave their tots the thrill of sitting on the sacred seats.

* * *

The hors d'ouevres are excellent at l'Escargot, and so is the filet mignon; and the restaurant is an apt illustration of the French genius for cluttering up a dining room artistically with all sorts of knicknacks.

* * *

* * *

Yesterday the Senate cloakrooms were a-buzz about the appointment of charming Senator Dixie Bibb Graves; nothing has aroused the elder statesmen so much in a long time. You'd have thought the preacher's son had eloped with the village milliner. But if a wife has her heart set on being a Senator, and a husband happens to have a senatorship jingling in his pocket, who's to veto the appointment.

* * *

With her hair parted in the middle and her short-sleeved black dress, Senator Caraway looks smarter than ever these days . . . They say she reads every bill clear through, which is more than some of her male colleagues do.

* * *

Not one tourist in ten (nor one native in 20) ever notices the magnificent rows of scores of eagles around the cornice of the center section of the Department of Commerce building . . . But the architect and I appreciate them.

When short, rugged Senator Bilbo saunters past Senator Barkley, the majority leader, he looks a little like a schoolboy asking teacher for permission to leave the room . . . It is almost impossible to believe that Senator McAdoo is three years older than Senator Hiram Johnson, his colleague, who nurses his strength these days.

* * *

I'd like to hear a debate between Senator Bridges of New Hampshire and Senator Austin of Vermont—both have a devastating drumfire style of oratory . . . Washington's vast apartment houses, populous as a county seat town, are awesome to us cowboys . . . I can well believe the tale of the Rocky Mountain statesman who leased a corner apartment on a top floor and was never heard of again . . . And now it's au revoir and good luck to Congress, and may they all be back in January or sooner—the town isn't quite the same without them; not quite so sprightly.

* * *

At one of the town's smarter hotels a fastidious Senator ordered jellied tomato soup and got jellied consomme; asked for a well-done steak and got a rare one; finally put in a bid for green chartreuse and was brought yellow chartreuse.

"As I leave the place," he warned steak and got a rare one; finally put going to bite the head-waiter right on the ear!"

69th Man Dead In D. C. Traffic Since Jan. 1

The sixty-ninth traffic death in the District was recorded yesterday when Paul J. Allen, 27, 4206 Tenth street northeasst, died in Casualty Hospital of injuries received Wednesday in an auto accident at Thirteenth and Kearney streets northeast. Allen's death brings the total of traffic deaths to 16 more than the 53 deaths recorded for the same period last year.

Grace Capes, 23, 9137 Thornhill road, Colesville, Md., was treated at Garfield Hospital for lacerations to the face suffered when the auto in which she was riding collided with a car driven by Joseph White, 24, colored, 429 M street northwest, at Logan Circle.

Swerving to avoid hitting a dog at G and Thirty-second streets southeast, Charles C. Weaver, 18, 714 Thirty-first street southeast, was thrown from his motorcycle. His foot and knee were cut.

Blackie Gilman, 59, 1470 Clifton street northwest, was struck by an auto driven by Austin Kiplinger, 18, 107 Spring drive, Cherrydale, Va., yesterday, while standing at Fourteenth and Clifton streets. Taken to Garfield Hospital by Kiplinger, he was treated for lacerations to his left arm and possible fracture of the left leg.

A transient on his way to Baltimore yesterday was struck by an automobile and slightly injured. The man, who gave his name as Eugene Reems, 38, of Bronx, N. Y., was treated at Casualty Hospital, where it was said he may have a fractured skull.

In Grip of Heat, House Passes Bill To Help Reindeer

The House spent three hours of a blistering hot day passing an Alaskan reindeer bill.

The bill, which went back to the Senate for action on amendments, would let the Interior Department develop a reindeer industry for natives and Eskimos.

Representative Green (Democrat), Florida, supported the measure, although he said he knew little about reindeer.

Apparently he was a bit hazy on his geography, too, for he spoke of Eskimos being pushed farther and farther toward the North Pole and into the "Atlantic Ocean."

Representative Ditter (Democrat), after comment on the President's financial program, conceded, "if we're going to have a Santa Claus, I suppose we'll have to provide the reindeer."

100 Colored Infants Parade Health Today

It will be a hot time in a hot town this morning for nearly 100 colored children. Commencing at 10:30 o'clock, infants, ranging in age from 6 months to 5 years, will strut and pout and cry in a baby parade at Barry Farms Playground, Nichols avenue and Summer road southeast. One will be adjudged the healthiest by a three-woman committee.

Three contestants will sate their new-born appetites with milk and graham crackers. Next on the program, arranged by Physical Director Florence Matthews, will be lectures on health by Drs. A. G. Snyder and W. E. Lewis.

Memorial That Wasn't Built Puzzles With Its Cornerstone

George Washington Association Invited to Say What's to Be Done With Marker From Art Gallery Site.

What to do with a used cornerstone that never has marked anything is a problem now on the hands of the George Washington Memorial Association.

A. K. Shipe, attorney for the association, had the question raised for him yesterday when there arrived at his office a small metal box that had been uncovered on the foundation site of the big $10,000,000 National Gallery of Art.

The workmen dug up the huge white marble stone that had contained the box, and were considerably puzzled—until it was figured out in the office of Architect John Russell Pope that, although the George Washington Memorial was never erected, its corner stone was laid.

By messenger the box was then rushed to the office of David E. Finley, a trustee for the art gallery. Being a very wise man, Mr. Finley remembered that Mr. Shipe had been the memorial association's lawyer.

Quite frankly, Mr. Shipe does not know what is going to happen to the box. It might be opened and its contents checked—since some valuable historic documents are among them. It might be included in the corner stone contents for the new gallery. Or something else might happen.

There does not seem to be much demand for opening the box. If anything was going to be missing, it has had plenty of time. The cornerstone was laid in 1921.

One ornament on the box created much interest in the offices through which it passed on its way to Mr. Shipe. It is a large gold star and, supposedly, was taken from the floor of the old railway station that was on the gallery site long before the George Washington Memorial thought of being there. According to legend, it marked the spot where President Garfield was standing when assassinated.

During its lifetime, the George Washington Memorial Association raised more than $500,000. It was incorporated in 1898, and its donations came from throughout the country. But soon after the cornerstone was laid it became evident the donations would not be sufficient to erect the memorial. The plan was "dissolved" by act of Congress, and it was decided that memorial donations would go to George Washington University.

Plot to Burn Home Of Father-in-Law Is Charged to Veteran

Charged with attempting to set fire last May 30 to his father-in-law's home at Berwyn, Md., where his estranged wife had gone to live, Ralph D. Van Horn, 40, 700 block of Nineteenth street northwest, yesterday was ordered held for the Prince Georges County grand jury.

Van Horn, a war veteran, waived preliminary hearing and was placed under bond of $500.

Arrested here several months ago, Van Horn successfully fought extradition. Then, a week ago, he surrendered to Maryland authorities.

The arson charge was brought by his father-in-law, Dr. Walter M. Wooster.

Marine Reserves End Rifle Practice

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Quantico, Va., Aug. 20.—The Fifth Battalion, fleet Marine Corps Reserve, is scheduled to complete its record rifle firing tomorrow. Practically the entire week has been spent on firing and weapons demonstrations.

Featuring today's training schedule was a demonstration of Infantry weapons and machine guns by Company D, of the First Battalion of the Fleet Marine froce, with the reservists as observers.

An entire village had been constructed as a target. Accurate fire by 37-millimeter batteries, Stokes Brandt mortars and Browning heavy machine guns destroyed the village.

Catholic field mass and field Protestant services will be held on Sunday.

Next week will be taken up almost entirely by combat maneuvers. Officers and enlisted men alike are of the opinion that this is the best, most instructive and most advanced training schedule ever attempted by reservists. Morale is high and the sick list is practically nil.

Deficiency Item Provides Money For Navy Hospital

Funds to begin construction of the new Naval Hospital as soon as a site has been selected would be made available by a $600,000 item in the third deficiency bill passed yesterday by the Senate. A similar measure was approved by the House and the two bills are being considered by a conference committee, which is expected to report today.

President Roosevelt said yesterday he intended to visit two more proposed locations. White House officials have intimated the President was favorably impressed by the tract near the Dalecarlia Reservoir.

Plans for the $3,200,000 structure have been under preparation for some time.

Abattoir Work Will Continue, Lawyer Avers

Gobel Company Defies Effort of D. C. Officials to Ban Plant.

Construction of the slaughter house on Benning road will continue, despite warnings that District officials will fight to prevent its completion, D. Edward Clarke, attorney for Adolf Goebel, Inc., declared yesterday.

Breach of promise and efforts to deprive of property rights without due process of law were charged against the District by Clarke in a letter addressed to Commissioner M. C. Hazen.

"If District officials feel that the operation of this abattoir would be a detriment to the District of Columbia, they should undertake to prevent it by some legal means rather than the methods heretofore adopted," he declared.

Willing to Co-operate.

While declaring that he could see no use for an open hearing as to the "health menace" the abattoir would be, "these matters having been heretofore investigated by your committee," Clarke said he would be "glad to co-operate to that end."

Commissioner Hazen invited the Gobel company to a public hearing which he said would be necessary before the abattoir could be given permission to operate. The report of Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the Public Health Service was included with the invitation as proof that the city's sewage system could not take care of the refuse from the proposed plant.

Clarke declared that the Gobel company has worked in co-operation with District officials and said the question of being a "health menace" was investigated by a District committee last October.

Changes Were Made.

"It was concluded then, upon report submitted by Harold A. Kemp, that the water and waste matter introduced in the sewage system would not constitute a nuisance provided that changes were made in the plumbing plans in accordance with suggestions.

"My client made those changes at considerable expense."

When the fight continued despite the plumbing changes, an equity suit was started and "it was agreed that upon dismissal of the suit, the final building permit would be issued.

"I, therefore, am unable to understand your position now, when compared with the agreement concerning our permits and licenses, upon which agreement the equity suit was dismissed."

Checkers Crown Of South Is Won By District Man

Richmond, Aug. 20 (AP).—Herman Rudolph, of Washington, today won the Southern Checker Championship in an atmosphere crackling with more concentration than ever was evidenced in a dozen crossroad stores.

The former western Pennsylvania champion defeated J. E. Ingram, of West Palm Beach, Fla., by winning two games and drawing on two during 4½ hours of playing which ended in early morning hours. That made it a 3-to-1 victory for Rudolph.

Earlier in the day Harry Leiberman, of 3726 Connecticut avenue, Washington, who jumped from being a ski champion to becoming a leading checker player, won a $50 purse at the Southern Checker Association Tournament here.

He defeated Stephen Fairchild, of Detroit, Mich., junior U. S. champion, 1-0 in a 12-game match that required two days to play. Eleven of the games were draws.

D. C. Employment Bureau Proposed

A District-operated employment bureau was asked yesterday in a request sent to the Budget Bureau by the Distrcit Unemployment Compensation Board.

The agency asks for $75,000 from the Federal Government to set up an employment service for jobless who seek relief.

Unemployment insurance collections from about 175,000 workers here up to July 15 were $3,704,000. Benefit payments will begin January 1.

Senate Allots $210,000 for New Armory

Fund Roosevelt Recommended Restored to Deficiency Bill.

A $210,000 fund for the purchase of a site for a new District National Guard armory at the foot of East Capitol street was added to the third deficiency bill yesterday after being refused by the Appropriations Committee.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, made the motion and pointed out that the estimate of $210,000 was submitted by President Roosevelt.

He stated that unless the site were purchased soon the price might be increased. No objections were made to the motion.

Controversy Revived.

The Jefferson Junior High School site controversy was revived when Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, offered an amendment to give the District Commissioners discretionary power in purchasing a site in the Southwest.

The District supply act had authorized the expenditure of an unused appropriation to complete the purchase of a site, but had precluded the Johnson & Wimsatt property, which has been in dispute for years.

If the Burns amendment becomes a law, the Commissioners will be able to buy the Johnson & Wimsatt tract in the area bounded by Seventh and Ninth and H and I streets southwest and add it to the land previously purchased in that area for $126,000.

It is understood that Johnson & Wimsatt representatives are now willing to sell the land for less than the $195,000 which was made available by the 1938 act.

$9,000 Is Added.

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, explained in answer to an inquiry from Senator King that the money was not to be used for construction on the disputed site on or near the Tidal Basin.

The Senate not only approved the $68,000 in District deficiency appropriations voted by the House but added $5,000 for a new tax survey and $4,000 in additional judgments.

While approving most of the Federal construction for the District, the Senate struck out $1,500,000 for an annex to the Government Printing Office and $200,000 for the purchase of property at 1724 F street northwest.

Beauties Dispute Capital Selection For U. S. Contest

Complaints regarding selection of the winner of the Miss Washington Beauty Contest will be placed in the hands of a national board as a matter of formality, Gordon Hittenmark, sponsor, announced yesterday.

There were two complaints from runners-up concerning the triumph of Miss Helen Greene, who was picked as the most beautiful girl, and who will go to Atlantic City to seek the title of Miss America.

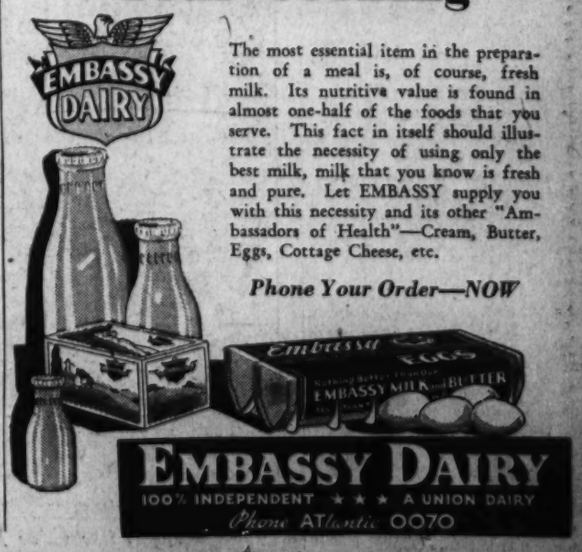

The complaints came from Barbara and Mary Fay, who said Miss Greene was married and a mother.

Take Tenth Game From Cronin Men

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Boston, Aug. 20.—The weather was sizzling, and the Nats—in the liberal sense of the word—were hot, too, on this warmest August 20 afternoon in Boston's last 66 years. They produced a pitcher who could beat Lefty Grove and wrested a 3-1 game away from the expensive Boston Red Sox.

They were dropping down into cheaper company today, as they say at the race track, and rebounded from four straight lickings by the Yankees with a superb display against the fourth-place Boston club which, incidentally, was tasting its seventh straight beating at the hands of the Nats this season.

The pitcher who outpitched Grove was tall, taciturn Monte Weaver, who was forced out of the game in the eighth inning only because Buddy Myer's grievous error inspired a Red Sox threat. But Grove, too, was out of the game by that time, and the Nats produced in Ed Linke a relief pitcher who brought instant relief.

Heat Gets Owens.

The thermometer was registering 97 officially, but downtown it was topping the 100 mark, and evidence of the terrific heat was spotlighted when Umpire-in-Chief Clarence (Brick) Owens collapsed from sunstroke in the seventh inning.

Boston's Eric McNair was at bat when Owens, equipped with mask and chest protector, and apparently broiling under this regulation blue serge suit, wobbled and started to sag to the ground when McNair grabbed him. Play was instantly halted and Umpire Moriarty and Roland Logan, Red Sox trainer, assisted the stricken umpire to the Boston dugout.

On the dugout steps, Owens slumped completely and was carried to the umpires' quarters, where the Boston club physician treated him and accompanied him to his hotel. His condition tonight was reported as not serious.

In the face of shoddy support by his teammates, Grove was pitching a gallant game and the Nats could show but six hits off him during the eight innings he worked. Their seventh hit they made off Rube Walberg in the ninth. Weaver and Linke permitted the Red Sox eight hits. Freddie Sington, who has been a huge nonentity in the Nats' line-up for weeks, finally made his presence felt when he banked across the first two runs of the game in the fourth inning to break up what had been a scoreless duel.

Stone was on base by virtue of his walk and Kuhel had beaten out a hit to McNair when Sington arrived at bat with two out and blasted a vicious single into right centerfield to score both of his pals.

Joe Cronin personally got one of those runs back for the Sox in the same inning when he belted a handsome homer far over the left-field wall with none on base. But that was to be Boston's only run of the day.

Nats Score Again.

The Nats picked up their third run in the sixth when Buddy Myer singled to center, Sington singled to left and Rick Ferrell scored Myer with a looping single to left that Mills failed to hold after a long sprint. And then Weaver proceeded to make that lead stand up.

Manager Harris suspected that the heat was taking its toll from Weaver and shoved Ed Linke in there in the seventh with the dangerous Higgins at bat. Linke got rid of him on an easy grounder to Travis. Bucky Harris was awful glad.

Giants Lace Phils, 13-6; Get 21 Blows

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 20.—The New York Giants put on their biggest offensive display of the season today to trample the Phillies, 13 to 6, with a 21-hit attack. Mel Ott hit his twenty-fifth homer of th year.

Pending the result of the league-leading Chicago Cubs' game in Cincinnati tonight, the victory boosted the Giants to within 2½ games of the National League lead.

Carl Hubbell finished up the game for the New Yorkers after Dick Coffman was spiked in the sixth. Clyde Castleman, who started, had to be relieved because of the heat in the third, with the Giants leading 4 to 0.

Joey Archibald and Stewart Added To Lou Ambers-Cowboy Scott Card

Joey Archibald, the amiable assassin who put a decided cramp in Lou Gevinson's style here several weeks ago, and Ossie Stewart, Pittsburgh middleweight, have been added to the all-star card to be presented August 31 at Griffith Stadium, it was announced last night.

A stablemate of lightweight champion Lou Ambers, who tangles with Howard Scott in the 10-round feature, Archibald was signed at the insistence of his pilot, Al Weil, who declined to let Ambers fight unless Joey also appeared. That was all right with the matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn, but the price Weil demanded wasn't, and not until late yesterday was the matter ironed out and Joey declared in.

JOEY ARCHIBALD.

Archibald's opponent has not been determined, but there is more than an outside chance that he will face Baby Manuel, who kayoed Bobby Dechter in the third round last Monday night.

Stewart, who lays claim to the dubious honor of the world Negro middleweight title, won his last seven scraps here, and has met defeat only once in 43 engagements.

Scott, who fought a bristling battle with Ambers last Monday night at Hartford, losing the decision, already has begun work for the return match. The transplanted Texan holds decisions over two former world champions, Bat Battalino and Frankie Klick, and also won two of three bouts with Norment Quarles. He lost to the former Southern Conference lightweight king on the police show card, but it was a disputed decision.

Yanks Score On Dickey's Homer, 8-7

Defeat A's in 10-Inning Battle; Run Winning Streak to Five.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 20.—Bill Dickey's twenty-fifth homer of the year, with one out in the tenth inning, gave the Yankees an 8-to-7 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics today and ran their current winning streak to five straight. Lynn Nelson hit a pinch homer for the A's.

"Grandma" Johnny Murphy, the Yanks' four-star relief pitcher, received credit for the victory, although the A's tied the score on him in the ninth inning with a three-run rally. He took over the pitching assignment when Ivy Paul Andrews faltered in the seventh.

Dickey hit a double and single, as well as his homer, to lead the Yanks' 11-hit attack.

Local Typos, New Yorkers Seek Crown

Washington Nine Has to Win Twice to Win Baseball Title.

By Jack Munhall.

Victorious in yesterday's encounters, Washington and New York will meet in a doubleheader today at 11 a. m. at Griffith Stadium to decide the championship of the twenty-seventh annual International Union Printer Baseball Tournament in progress here.

The Gothamites, who nosed out Chicago, 10-9, yesterday on a dramatic home run with the bases loaded in the eighth frame, have won four games and lost none and need but one win in the twin bill to take the title. The locals, whose late inning rallies sank the hopes of the Baltimore nine, 11-5, are faced with the herculean task of halting the strong New Yorkers twice in order to capture their thirteenth printer title.

New York went to work on a 9-5 deficit after two were out in the eighth inning.

This blow gave the winners a 10-to-9 lead, for previously a run had been scored on an infield out.

Washington gave the hometown fans many a doubtful moment before rising to tally a trio of runs in the eighth and ninth to break a 5-to-5 tie and coast to an easy victory. Heinie Webb, who relieved Carl Bean after Baltimore had tied the score at 5-5 all in the seventh, received credit for the win, as he allowed but two hits and nary a run in his 2 2-3 innings of toil. It was the second triumph in three days for the 42-year-old veteran of 20 seasons of play.

Sharing honors with Webb was Charley (Chick) Holbrook, tall, leftfielder, who sparkled in the field and contributed three hits and two sacrifices for a perfect day.

Probable pitchers for Washington today are George Mosedale in the opener and Heinie Webb in the nightcap.

Gehringer Climbs In Race of Hitters

Charley Gehringer, of the Tigers, was the only member of baseball's batting "Big Six" to boost his average through yesterday's games, getting two-for-three to climb three points to .379 and increase his edge in the American League race to seven points. Joe DiMaggio, of the Yanks, although hitting only one-for-five, replaced Cecil Travis of the Senators in second place. Travis fell into a tie for third as Lou Gehrig moved back into the top half dozen.

Louis, Schmeling Bout in 1938 Is All Ready for Signing

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—The return match between Joe Louis and Max Schmeling is all but signed, sealed and delivered—for next June . . . . For all we know it may be signed now but Promoter Mike Jacobs reserves the right to change his mind, on this or any other fistic project . . . . It will take place in New York, and should draw a million-dollar "gate" . . . . One reason, among others, why it can't be held in our town this fall is the presence of the anti-Nazi issue in New York's mayoralty campaign . . . . Moreover, three heavyweight title bouts in one year, even if held in separate towns, would be a strain on the industry . . . .

Schmeling made the mistake of trying to outsmart Promoter Jacobs . . . . He turned down a bonafide offer of $300,000 to fight Jim Braddock for the title . . . . Then the German sought a match abroad with Tommy Farr, only to have the Welshman taken right out from under him for the bout here with Joe Louis . . . . It's literally true that you have to get up early in the morning to pull anything over on Mike Jacobs . . . . When Mike crawls out of the hay as late as 5:30 a. m. he apologizes for oversleeping . . . . His architect, Lionel Levy, figures four hours of shuteye is par for the course when a big fight job gets underway . . . .

March Wins D. C. Junior Tennis Title

Defeats Johnsen in Five Sets After Dropping First Two Sets.

By Bob Garrison.

In an unbelievable comeback, Harry March, playground instructor, who through a three-year career in the junior tennis ranks has been "always a bridesmaid, but never a bride" finally middle-aisled it with his first championship yesterday when he defeated David Strand Johnsen to win the District of Columbia Junior Championship at the Army-Navy Country Club, 1—6, 1—6, 6—1, 9—7, 6—3.

Shortly after Johnsen had bowed in the singles play, his sister, Ruth, failed to annex a championship for the family name when she and her partner, Dorothy Barclay, bowed in straight sets in the girls' doubles finals to the team of Hazel "Jimmy" Bishopp and Mary Gray, playground duo, 7—5, 6—3.

In the junior doubles, Davie returned and, with his partner, Marvin Carlock, of Los Angeles, Colorado and Utah, to rout the team of Harry March and Billy Turner in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1, 6—0.

A more thrilling finish may have concluded another Junior Singles championship match but veteran observers couldn't recall it as they watched March come from the depths of almost certain defeat, call upon his perfect physical condition, and defeat the "patent leather kid" of local tennis after he had had March at match point, his service, in the fourth set.

Under a torrid mid-day sun, Johnsen opened the match with as brilliant diplay of strokes he, or any other performer in the city for that matter, has displayed this season to sweep through the first two sets in 20 minutes. He had March on the run through the first and second sets, hitting deep drives to the corners that March found unmanageable.

A sudden reversal in form, coupled with a change in style of play by March which saw him run to the net to score many placements, cost Davie the third set by the identical score he had won the first two, 1—6.

Importance was attached to the fact that Davie had to resort to a warped racquet to complete the match after he had broken a better one in the last game of the second set, but March's superb condition over the long route was the underlying cause of victory. For, in the fourth set, the Roosevelt High School student stood at match point with games 5-3 in his favor.

Pirates Beat Cards By 7-to-4 Count

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 20.—Cy Blanton won his twelfth game today as Pittsburgh's batters rallied behind his six-hit pitching to defeat St. Louis 7-to-4 and moved to within one-half game of third place in the National League.

Johnny Mize's seventeenth homer of the season in the first frame with Terry Moore on base and Joe Medwick's twenty-seventh circuit smash in the third with Brown on base gave the Cardinals a four run lead. Medwick later was ejected by Umpire Ballanfant for his objections to a third strike.

MacFayden in Form; Bees Trim Dodgers

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, Aug. 20.—The Boston Bees made every hit count today and nosed out the Dodgers, 6 to 5, behind the effective pitching of Danny Macfayden.

Although they were outhit, 9 to 12, they bunched two hits each in the third and fourth, and three in the fifth, for a total of five runs off Max Butcher, and then put the game on ice in the seventh, on a walk, Roy Johnson's single and Tony Cuccinello's fly-out.

Macfayden went seven innings for the Bees, and then gave way to the heat. Gabbo Gabler finished up, giving a run each in the eighth and ninth. The run in the eighth was produced by Woody English's first homer of the year.

U. S. Women Beat Britons In Net Play

Alice Marble and Helen Jacobs Win Singles for Wightman Cup.

By the Associated Press.

Forest Hills, Aug. 20.—Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan gave America a sweep of the first day's play in the Wightman Cup matches against England when they crushed Evelyn Dearman and Joan Ingram, 6—3, 6—2, in the concluding doubles match. In the singles Miss Marble defeated Mary Hardwick, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4, and Helen Jacobs beat Kay Stammers, 6—1, 4—6, 6—4. America needed to win only one of the four matches scheduled tomorrow to retain the cup.

Miss Marble alone was given a really serious tussle. Indifferent play cost her the first set to Miss Hardwick, who can be very brilliant at times, and it wasn't until the middle of the deciding set, when the San Francisco girl abandoned her fast service entirely and relied on her high-kicking second delivery, that she really gained the upper hand. A burning sun handicapped both of them, making them content to stick to the baseline.

Helen Jacobs, playing in her eleventh Wightman Cup competition, was too court-wise in the long run for Kay Stammers. After dropping the second set, in which she had tried to match the English girl's speed, Helen went back to her old reliable chop stroke in the final canto and let Kay beat herself. It wasn't exciting tennis, but it was nice headwork.

In the doubles, it was a question of a balanced pair against an unbalanced combination. Miss Ingram, making her Wightman Cup debut, was a definite handicap to her partner, while Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marbie, breaking their opponents' service six times to the Britons' three, teamed in near-perfect fashion.

Miss Marble tomorrow will follow Miss Jacobs on the court for a singles match with Miss Stammers. Then the No. 3 singles players, Mrs. Fabyan and Margot Lumb, will settle their differences, with Miss Jacobs and Mrs. Marjorie Van Ryn, fourth and last member of the United States team, pairing in the concluding doubles match against Miss Stammers and Freda James.

Bureau of Engraving Wins From Bolling

Bureau of Engraving and Printing maintained its mathematical chance to capture the second half championship in the Industrial League yesterday when it was awarded a forfeit over Bolling Field in the fourth inning. Bolling needing a victory to clinch the second-half play, was ordered to forfeit and accused of repeated stalling in the third and fourth innings after Bureau scored 11 runs in the first to lead 11-0.

Washington Linkmen Bow Out of Suburban Invitation Play

'4 Host City Vets Meet In Semifinal

Overton Defeats Burnett 3 and 1; Ken Lafferty Is Defeated.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pikesville, Md., Aug. 20.—A quartet of golfing veterans from the host city survived the Suburban Club's Invitation Tournament quarterfinal rounds here today and meet tomorrow in the semifinals.

Washington linksmen were eliminated, one by each of today's double victors. Spencer S. Overton, Rolling Road's former State champion, broke Volney Burnett's jinx in a second-round match and defeated the Indian Spring ace, 3 and 1.

Ken Lafferty, also representing the Four Corner's Club, was well on his game this morning and defeated John Huffman, 5 and 3, but lost the final hole of his afternoon match against the Rodgers Forge No. 1 player, Frances Carnes, and bowed by a two-up margin.

Dettweiler Bows.

Billy Dettweiler and Harvey Johnson lost first-round decisions to Gene Bruning and Harris Jones, who, in turn, entered the semifinal round with afternoon victories.

Overton opposes Jones, the Baltimore Country Club star, whose victory over Otto Greiner was the surprise win of the quarterfinal matches, while Carnes meets Bruning for the right to play in the final round tomorrow.

Bobby Brownell is the lone District of Columbia golfer remaining in the semifinal rounds. The Manor youngster meets Victor Le Bow tomorrow in the third flight, third round, after his near-par golf was victorious by 2 up, and 3-and-1 margins over John Shaw, of Green Springs, and Dawson Faber, of Sparrows Point.

Overton 1 Up.

Overton was 1 up at the turn after Volney blew an early lead by missing a foot putt on the seventh hole and missing the short eighth green with his tee shot. They halved the ninth in birdie fours as the Fireman's putt for an eagle stopped on the lip of the cup.

Volney assumed the lead as he won the tenth with a par and eleventh with a birdie. A straying tee shot cost him the twelfth hole, but another birdie, his third in five holes, again put him 1 up on the fourteenth tee.

BURNETT hit his fifth tee shot of the tournament out of bounds on the par 5 fourteenth and followed it with another across the road as Overton easily won the hole with a birdie. Spence followed this with another subpar hole on the fifteenth, nearly holing his approach. After winning the next with par, he clinched the match by laying his tee shot stiff on the short seventeenth hole for a conceded birdie.

Lafferty Slips.

Lafferty, whose first two rounds had been the suprise of the event, lost his touch in his second round match and bowed to Carnes' mediocre golf, a late rally that gained back a three-hole deficit, stopping on the last hole.

Bruning was 72 against Dettweiler and was even par in the afternoon and he won over O'Brien, while Jones, underdog against Harvey Johnson, continued his upset tactics against Greiner as he holed a 20-foot birdie putt against the young Mound City stroker on the last hole to square the issue, and win on the nineteenth as Greiner's second carromed off a tree and he took five against Jones' orthodox par.

Pam Barton to Undergo Operation, Out of Golf

London, Aug. 20 (U.P.).—Pamela Barton, 1936 British and U. S. women's golf champion, today announced she would not defend her American title in Memphis this year because of ill health.

She has suffered several attacks of appendicitis and plans to undergo an operation within the next fortnight. Also, Pam's book, "A Stroke a Hole," is scheduled to be published within the next few weeks, which probably will take away her amateur status.

List Archery Matches.

This Morning

Boston, Aug. 20.

Events that January day in 1681 when the night final of The Protestant Mercury reported the result of the first known boxing match—between the Duke of Marlboro's footman and his butcher—the history of British heavyweights has been a sorry saga that Britons would prefer to forget.

And England is not anticipating with any particular relish the latest chapter which will have to do with Tommy Farr, who has made so bold as to challenge Joe Louis for the title. Farr is the British champion, but there are great misgivings in England as Thursday night's battle with Louis nears. In fact, there were great misgivings about Farr as a title contender from the moment he signed to fight Louis.

POVICH.

* * * *

The British journalists who are in the United States covering Farr's training camp activities, are preparing British fight fans for the worst. In fact, they are covering the developments at Farr's Long Branch camp as if they were events leading up to the tragedy—of Farr's speedy defeat on Thursday evening.

* * * *

We learn from Bill Cunningham the nimble-minded Boston news hawk, that one of the British sports writers who was reporting the ill-fated attempt of England to wrest the America's Cup from these shores at Newport earlier in the month, said frankly that he had never heard of Farr until a few months ago. Another British reporter, with an obvious dislike for Farr's chances against Louis, described Farr as "a bally joke" in the prize ring.

* * * *

Long has been the history of British boxing, but never in the 250-odd years that England has sponsored the sport has the island produced a world heavyweight champion, although in the lighter classes there have been some very good British fighters indeed.

* * * *

Jim Figg, whom British boxing fans like to remember best, was accredited as the English champion in 1719, and Jack Broughton, who won the British title in 1732 and held it for 18 years, was another famous British heavyweight, but neither ever even pretended to be the world champion—chiefly because boxing wasn't flourishing in any other part of the world.

* * * *

They had their Charley Mitchell, too, the comparatively little fellow who, some thought, could have licked John L. Sullivan, but that never came to pass, and then British heavyweight boxing went into a terrific nose dive.

* * * *

There was, of course, Bob Fitzsimmons, who was born in Helsten, Cornwall, but Ruby Robert never fought on British soil and always billed himself as a New Zealander, which didn't help much to remove the stigma of Britain's barreness.

* * * *

Not only that, but the British heavyweights who did leave England with world title pretentions during the past 20 years have been such a bad lot as to heap ridicule on the entire line and give American sports writers one of their choicest similies, "As flat as a British heavyweight."

* * * *

We speak, of course, of such canvas-backs as Joe Beckett, Bombardier Wells and Fainting Phil Scott, the three most accomplished swooners the heavyweight division ever produced. They came to America in search of the title with the eyes of England upon them and saw the sights of America from a prone position in almost every ring along the Atlantic Seaboard. They looked at more ceilings than the plasters' union.

* * * *

There is no truth to the report that Wells, Beckett and Scott actually shaved with bon ami because they had glass chins, but glass chins they did have, nevertheless. They had gone great guns in England where flights were truly boxing contets—not slugging affairs—but against American punchers they were helpless.

* * * *

Bombardier Wells was the first of the modern Britishers to come to America with title aspirations and he introduced a new note to American rings—the invisible knockout punch. The only trouble with Wells was that he was not the author of the punch, but the recipient. In fact, Wells would go down on the mere suspicion that he was going to be hit. He was a sagger, who dropped first to one knee, then to both knees and finally fell forward on his face with both arms extended in front like a rajah's man servant in obeisance.

* * * *

No sagger was Beckett and there was never any suspicion that he went down from fright. The Beckett chin was always too inviting and what followed was according to the strictest laws of gravity. Beckett fell forward or backward with equal grace in a high arc and always came to rest flat on his back with the ten count usually superfluous.

* * * *

Phainting Phil Scott, though, was a clutcher. He never went down without a struggle—with himself. When hit he would go into a rubbery-legged dance, grab at his groin and claim a foul. But he always went down eventually and win or lose his foul claim, he always ended up in the hospital with an injury that he called an impingement of the sciatica nerve which is supposed to do horrible things to fighters—particularly British heavyweights.

Selections at Narragansett Park.

Dear Al,

From California comes the word that henceforth jockeys in that State can use only brown whips in races. It seems that some of the saddle slickers have been using bats of bright colors and have not been carrying them for the sole purpose of getting more speed out of their mounts. Instead they have been waving them in the eyes of horses and it is said that the trick has changed the result of several coast events. The natural colored whip—brown—does not lend itself so readily to this purpose. The brown whip is harder to see. The official theory is that if a boy tries to hinder a horse with a brown whip he must go to greater lengths, making his tactics obvious to the stewards. It is said that the California boys worked into the "loud" whips gradually, starting by putting adhesive tape on the handles. Of late, however, some have shown up with young totem poles and not a few have been using bats of a blinding white. It looks as though the boys will have to shoot another angle. Perhaps they will start waving their hats in the stretch. Which reminds me, I have little excuse for doing any hat waving these days. But then, there's Marlboro.

BILL.

First race—Mr. Bun seems to be headed for a victory in this field. This is a steady performer and needs only the right handling. Boscobel is in good shape now and should be no worse than second. Third money should go to Joy Flag.

Second race—Ejector has a slight edge over Aureate in this group. Both are fit and ready and I look forward to a close battle. Whippercracker is a fair sort and probably will make a money appearance.

Third race—Mixwell has worked well for a contest of this sort. Likes the route and appears ready for a best effort. Wise Duke and Top Tax to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Peona deserves the call in this rather closely matched field. This one is as fit as hands can make him and has the speed to get home. Autumn Quest is a fairly consistent one and is dangerous. Stage Beauty for the show award.

Fifth race—Torolee finds conditions that suit in this event. Needs only an intelligent ride. Sorceress figures close to the top one and is slated to be a keen contender. Butter deserves money mention.

Sixth race—Fair Knightess has defeated this kind before and needs only to race back to one of his good efforts. Zoic is not outclassed by any means and will be in there battling. Whoopee to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Reelon has too many speed guns for these, I do believe. Buster Boy and Hope Eternal are in good shape now and will be ready if the top one falters.

AT CUMBERLAND.

2—War Rumor, Mazyniata, Jack Low.
3—Chipeta, Mio, Castabout, Lady B.
4—Mint Bud, Tambov, Veritas.
5—Dudley C., Poppyman, Dixie Bee.
6—Light Action, Dressmaker, Huppy.

Motorboats Race Today At Solomons

New Club's First Regatta Attracts Fine Array of Fast Craft.

By Bill Ackerman.
The Post's All Outdoors Editor.

Sixty miles from Washington in the inner or Drum Point Harbor of Solomon's Island, nationally known drivers of outboard racing boats will be whining their ways, this afternoon, around an exceptionally fine course in the various events of the First Annual Regatta of the new Solomons Island Yacht Club, sanctioned and staged under the rules of the American Power Boat Association.

Leaders in the A. P. B. A. scoring hope to substantially jump their high point score on this course, that regardless of the weather, will permit fine running.

Laid out with the first buoy just off the Fisheries Station dock, the second in the mouth of St. John's Creek and the third close in to Bowens dock, it will be a course that will give to the spectators every chance to see all the turns as well as the straight-away runs.

The events, starting with the midget class at noon, will be run on a 30-minute schedule and there will be heats for every class up to and including F.

Fred Jacoby, jr., last years champion, will be entered in four classes with four boats, A, B, C, and F, as will Douglas Fonda. Anytime you get these two together there is bound to be some fast stepping.

Mollie Tyson and Elisa Tyson, the two racing daughters of a grand race man, Commodore James S. Y. Tyson, of Chestnut Hill, Pennsylvania, will be on hand to add their bit in the way of thrills to the midget events.

On Sunday, the inboards will take to a mile and two-thirds straight-away course on the other side of the island that starts just off Sand Point and runs to a point close to the tied up Shipping Board vessels.

R. Ferrell, Lazzeri Fight Under Stands

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 20.—The Nats and the Yankees were feuding again yesterday at Yankee Stadium, it was learned here tonight when Washington players confirmed reports of a fist fight that occurred under the stands after the game.

Catcher Rick Ferrell, of the Nats, and Second Baseman Tony Lazzeri, of the Yankees, were the figures in the fight. It was the culmination of an argument at the plate during the tenth inning of the game when hot words passed between the two, with Lazzeri accusing Ferrell of tipping his bat during a swing.

The pair met under the stands en route to their dressing rooms and the action was lively until Wes Ferrell, spying his brother in a mess, leaped on Lazzeri and ended the fight. Impartial observers voted a draw decision.

Deering Swim Victor.

Bud Deering, veteran of Rosedale Pool swim meets, scored a sensational victory in the 50-yard free style over his teammate, William McGrath, yesterday, when the 19-year-old custom of holding a meet in the Rosedale Pool annually was continued. The meet was well attended and playground officials were pleased to see many of the old timers back both as contestants and spectators.

Budge, Riggs Win Way to Casino Final

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 20.—America's top notch tennis amateur, Don Budge, and its most promising youngster, Bobby Riggs, brilliant California 19-year-old, today gained the final round of the Casino tournament.

Both are familiar with that bracket, for Budge won here in 1935 and Riggs last year in his first major Eastern grass triumph.

To become a finalist for the second time in three seasons, Budge overcame his Davis Cup teammate, Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, 8—6, 6—0, 6—0, and Riggs kept pace with him by outlasting Frank Parker, of Milwaukee, another U. S. internationalist, 6—8, 6—4, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, after a gruelling three and a half hour battle under a blazing sun.

Budge, who quit singles competition after his successful Davis Cup campaign, resumed it here Tuesday, but his game had suffered tremendously and he was far below his usual form until he faced off against the tiny Atlanta star.

Grant attempted to jump the Davis Cup ace by giving him everything he had during the first set. He cut loose from the baseline, but Budge, despite his erratic play, held even during the first 12 games, pulled into a lead on his own service and then cracked Grant's for an 8—6 set.

That daring and unsuccessful struggle sapped Grant's strength, and he was almost helpless as Budge raced through the next 12 games to wind up the match.

The Riggs-Parker semifinal was the longest and best match this week. It was a bit surprising when Parker came from behind at 2-1 and took four love games in a row from the Californian as he was pulling out the opening set.

Budge and Gene Mako, the National Doubles champions and Davis Cup pair, gained the final round for the second consecutive year by defeating John McDiarmid, of Princeton, N. J., and Art Hendrix, Lakeland, Fla., 6—4, 6—4, 6—3. They will oppose the British Davis cuppers, G. Patrick Hughes and Charles E. Hare, in tomorrow's team final.

Berryville Horse Wins Third Title

Berryville, Va., Aug. 20.—Hunter's Choice from the Springsbury Stables of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, of this place, won his third championship of the year here today to conclude the annual exhibition of the Berryville horse show.

Before a happy crowd of 5,000 people the bay gelded son of Tournament II, just about clinched his chances for the award when he won the heavy and middleweight hunter event. His triumph yesterday was in the ladies hunter event, being rode by Miss Virginia Jacobs. A few seconds and thirds here and there throughout the two-day card kept him ahead of Clifton's Chatlain, a gray daughter of Coq Gaulois, who won the reserve.

But By Far, a stablemate of Hunter's Choice, turned in a better performance today. Colomoney won the green hunter event from a classy field to place the Springsbury Stables' names among the list of eligibles for the R. Powell Page Memorial Trophy, won for two straight years by Mrs. John Hay Whitney. Colomoney also annexed the Clarke County Hunters.

Mrs. Whitney had a very good day at the jumps. She won the hunt team class with an entry of Bon Diable, Two Leggins and Air Spirit. Her Spring Hope was tops in the Corinthian, with Bon Diable in second place and Missing Caddy third.

E. L. Redman was again head man about the half-bred classes, winning all three classes in this division. C. E. Norman, of Purcellville, and Llangollen, of Upperville, vied for honors in the heavy-draft events, while Miss Ann Clay Bayly and Stanley Green II were among the leaders in the pony classes.

Grains Tumble To New Lows In Pit Turmoil

Corn Drops 3⅝ Cents and Wheat 3⅛ in Heavy Selling.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—Stampede selling that started in the corn market and then spread to other commodities tumbled prices wildly downward late today to season low-price records.

September corn contracts, in which the flurry began, fell nearly 4 cents, the immediate extreme permissible limit, and September wheat collapsed 3⅛ cents to more than 25 cents under the season's high point reached hardly a month ago. Persistent refusal of importing nations to purchase wheat supplies on any big scale from this country appeared to have left the wheat market practically without support for at least the time being.

At the close corn was 1⅛@3⅝ cents under yesterday's finish, September, 94½@94⅝; December, 64⅝@65¾; Wheat, 2 cents to 2¾ down; September, 1.04½@1.04¾; December, 1.06½@1.06⅝; May, 1.08⅞@1.09; oats, ⅛@¾ off; December 29, and rye showing 1⅝@2⅞ drop; December, 75⅝@75½. Provisions results were unchanged to 50 cents lower.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Recede in Larger Sales Volume; U. S. Government Bonds Break; Wheat Drops.

New York, Aug. 20.—Heat, humidity and helplessness were all in the dog day's work in the financial district. Stocks grew increasingly sensitive to sales and closed lower for the fourth successive day on a volume of around 800,000 shares, the largest of the week. The retreat of Government bonds grew more rapid, most of the issues losing around half a point, the largest single day's losses in many months. Commodities also were soft in many sections. September wheat closed 2⅝ cents lower at $1.04¾ a bushel.

Stocks managed to rally for a short time early in the last hour, but gave way again when their feeble efforts brought them no large reward. Steel common sank below 114 for a loss of about 2 points. Until the last hour the industrial stock list had not been particularly week, although it had shown no rallying power. Most of the opening prices were higher. When selling appeared it found the buying troops resting in the shade or on vacation. Steels, rails, oils and motors were the first to feel the pressure.

Bond Selling Continues.

The bond market was full of rumors that the Federal Reserve Bank, either for its own account or for Treasury agency account or both, was supporting the Government bond market by scale buying orders for the first time since March and April. These rumors received added credence because of the unusual activity in Government obligations on the stock exchange. The Treasury in the past has liked to advertise the big buying orders it has placed by having them printed on the bond ticker.

It was generally admitted that if the cue to Government support was the existence of a "disorderly" market, there was ample excuse today for intervention on that basis. The market was at times extremely thin and the decline was exaggerated by the decision of many large holders of Treasury issues to sell out. Yesterday these investors had indicated that they wouldn't sell just yet. A fade-out in quotations is a great mind changer.

Numerous reasons may be advanced to explain the current weakness in Government bond prices. Many of them will be of the familiar variety, i. e., total absence of any sincere desire to balance the budget, preparations for additional huge borrowings by the Treasury, no taxation measure that promises to increase the total revenues of the Government, plans for pouring out more money in the form of bonuses to cotton and wheat farmers, indications of larger commercial demands on the banks and of rise in interest rates, and finally the increasing difficulties of some foreign currencies, which might precipitate another war of currency depreciation.

Frozen Assets.

Once a broad selling movement in Government bonds begins, it continues with its own momentum. The 14,000 banks throughout the country, which hold more than half the total of Treasury issues, get the wind up over prices and each wishes to curtail possible losses by beating the other fellow to the draw. Heretofore the retreat has stopped on large scale support by the Treasury and the Federal Reserve banks and the development of a market that shows such large losses for many banks that the managers of the banks decide it might be better to hold off for more advantageous conditions.

One thing is certain: if all the banks would try to sell large quantities of Government bonds at the same time the market would disappear entirely and the banks would find that what they had considered liquid asests were in reality frozen assets, except in so far as arrangements would be made for the Federal Reserve banks to take into hock any quantity of the bonds. They might do that, by creating a frightful condition of excess reserves and inflation, but even so it is not likely the reserve would continue to discount Government bonds at par if offerings became too great for comfort.

Wage Bill Retarded.

The week is ending with a fairly even balance of gains and losses on the domestic political front. The Black-Connery wage and hour fixing bill apparently won't get through this time, and next year is another story. President Roosevelt will soon be left undisturbed by Congress to shape his policies for the next sitting. The Supreme Court got its packing, but the result may not soon come up to increase the hesitation among business men to go ahead. The immediate influence is the prospect for an expansion in purchasing as a result of the heavy harvest, marketed at profitable prices.

It probably is still true that in spite of the soaring prices for meat and other foodstuffs, and the allround climb in retail prices for what the Nation largely regards as necessaries of life, such as automobiles, consumers' income is ahead of the game. The tide may nevertheless turn before long, which explains the growing concern of the installment purchase credit companies over the size of down payments and the length of time given on the loans.

Credit Demand Rises.

Meanwhile, the banks are feeling the seasonal rise in credit demands and, largely through sales of Government bonds, are preparing for additional loans. Special operations, as the payment of an HOLC bond issue without new borrowing, brought an increase in excess reserves this week. Money in circulation rose moderately and the weekly addition to the monetary gold stock was in no way diminished at $30,000,000, as metal flowed in from Europe and Japan. Meanwhile it is interesting to note that loans of New York City banks, in rising $25,000,000 this week (outside brokers' loans, which declined) now are in excess of $4,000,000,000 and are $856,000,000 higher than a year ago. The end of the year easily could bring some hardening of money rates.

Time Is Wasting.

Some observers believe that the haste of Messrs. Young, Kolbe, et al., in endeavoring to simplify the complicated holding companies of the former Van Sweringen brothers may indicate that Allan F. Kirby, financial angel of the present owners, was promised a short ride and a quick turnover on his investment.

Others point out that with a coupon payment on Alleghany 5s of 1950, due in two years, the payment of the $2,000,000 note held by the Ball Foundation, due in two years, and the expiration of the last extension of the Paine, Webber note to Nickel Plate, plus the expiration of the option for C. & O. to purchase Nickel Plate and Erie stock, all falling within that time, the present holders of controlling interests in the holding companies must move fast.

Can Companies Prosper.

A summary of figures on waste collection and disposal in a large American city, made in an article published in the Engineering News-Record, gives a little hint of how economy rises and falls in the homes in inverse ratio to prosperity at the office and in the factory. In 1935-36 the cubic yards of cans collected, for example, jumped amazingly over the previous year and was nearly half again as much as in the 1932-33 depression year.

Flour Down $1 a Bbl.; Bread Up 1c a Loaf

Minneapolis, Aug. 20 (AP).—The Northwest's big grain crop now rolling to market has pushed wholesale flour and mill feed prices to new lows for the year but consumers probably will not benefit until most of the crop is in.

Though family flour dropped to $6.65 a barrel today from $7.65 on July 18, householders are paying 1 cent more than they did a month ago for one pound loaves of bread. This was attributed to increased labor costs. A barrel is equivalent to two 98-pound sacks.

New Cord Corp. May Abandon Auto Making

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 20.—L. B. Manning, president of Cord Corporation, said today he and his associates would take a look around over the properties for the next few weeks" and then decide whether Cord and Auburn would continue in the automobile manufacturing field.

A decision on this, and a new name for the Cord Co.—the controlling interest in which was purchased from E. L. Cord two weeks ago by Manning, his personal associates, and a Wall Street banking syndicate arranged by Victor Emanuel, of Emanuel & Co.—will be forthcoming, Manning said, at the next directors meeting, around September 15.

The first meeting of the new board of directors lasted all day today at the offices of Emanuel & Co. Afterward Manning said that it was decided "to liquidate gradually over a period of time the miscellaneous investment holdings of the corporation and to concentrate attention in future on the various operating units in which the Cord Corporation holds substantial interests."

Operating Units.

The units are Auburn Automobile, Aviation Corporation, Checker Cab Manufacturing Co., New York Shipbuilding Co., Columbia Axle Co. and the Lycoming Manufacturing Co. Through Aviation Corporation, the Cord Corporation's interests extend to Stinson Aircraft Co.

"We believe these companies can be made to earn a good profit along operating lines," Manning said. "And we intend to concentrate on making them do so."

The banking syndicate arranged by Emanuel & Co., which included the firm of Schroder, Rockefeller & Co., took 500,000 of E. L. Cord's 658,000 shares and Manning, R. S. Pruitt and other personal associates took the rest.

"We intend to use 58,000 shares," Manning said, "for distribution among operating executives associated with us in future years, in the form of a bonus or stock-buying privilege or something of the like. The rest is our own investment." The banking syndicate's shares, he said, will also be kept for an investment and will not be offered to the public.

September Maturities.

New York, Aug. 20 (AP).—Corporate bond maturities during September will total $21,347,500, according to the Standard Statistics Company, of New York. The number of bonds and notes making up this total is 55 of which 5 amount to $1,000,000 or more.

Senators Give A 'Back Seat' To Mrs. Graves

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Dixie Bibb Graves, of Alabama, wife of Gov. Bibb Graves, became a Senator yesterday, succeeding Hugo L. Black, the Supreme Court's new Associate Justice.

The Alabama woman, fourth of her sex to get a seat in the Senate, took the simple oath of office before Vice President Garner immediately after the day's session opened.

The new Senator later told a radio audience the Senate had assigned her a back seat "where I'm supposed to be seen, perhaps, but certainly not heard."

"I'm afraid you are keeping me from my Senatorial duties," she said.

The Senator said she would return to Alabama soon after adjournment, but would return at least half a dozen times during the vacation period.

The new Senator told reporters later she was a "New Dealer," adding "Alabama believes very strongly in the New Deal." She said she had been "interested for many years in Senator Black's social policies."

Parrying questions as to her attitude on the House-deadlocked wage-hour bill which Black helped put through the Senate over opposition of many of his Southern colleagues, she said, "Let's wait until that comes up."

Black's office disclosed that he had taken an oath of office as associate Supreme Court justice before Charles F. Pace, financial clerk of the Senate.

Epidemic of Fleas Sweeps New York; Cause Unexplained

Geneva, N. Y., Aug. 20 (AP).—Fleas, ordinarily associated in the popular mind with side shows and jokes about tramps, have assumed the proportions of a serious menace in New York State, the State agriculture experiment station here announced today.

Many persons whose homes are afflicted have been compelled to obtain medical aid. In some cases, infection has set in. No cause for the outbreak was given.

Closed Shop At Cabin John Basin Planned

Union labor will be used exclusively on the $3,500,000 naval testing basin project at Cabin John, Md., for which preliminary excavation work is expected to begin Monday. Both skilled and unskilled labor will come within this provision, the Turner Construction Co., of New York, general contractors, has announced.

All labor for the project will be obtained from the Maryland State Employment Service, and union members who wish jobs should make their application at the office in the courthouse at Rockville.

The project, which is located at Carderoc, on the Conduit road, near Cabin John, is expected to employ hundreds of men. The employment office at Rockville is open from 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

George F. Ferris will be in general charge of the project for the Turner Co.

Maryland Boy, 6, Killed by Nurse In Gun Accident

Warner Jack Cunningham, 6-year-old son of Charles C. Cunningham, who operates a beer store on Redland road, near Norbeck, Md., was killed accidentally yesterday with a shotgun.

The child had gone to the home of Inez Johnson, 14, a colored girl, whose family had often looked after him. He was sitting in a chair while Inez cleaned the room.

She picked up the shotgun and laid it on the bed in order that she might clean the corner of the room. Either her finger touched the trigger or it was caught by the rumpled bed clothing. The gun fired and the child was killed instantly.

The boy's parents were separated two weeks ago. He has an older brother, Eugene, 9. The county welfare board took Eugene to Rockville pending investigation of Cunningham family conditions. The girl was released in $500 bond for a hearing on a manslaughter charge in Police Court at Rockville on September 1.

An indictment charging Betty Peal, 27, of Lancaster, Pa., with manslaughter was among the 91 returned by the District grand jury yesterday. It was in connection with the traffic death of William K. Price, 35, of Chester, Pa., four months ago.

Bob Burns Says—

No matter what business you're in, your success depends a whole lot on salesmanship. The best salesmen know when to stop talkin'. There are even times when downright indifference is better than a lot'ta words.

It's like the time my Cousin Lobelia got a telegram from her fella askin' her if she would marry him. She went down to the telegraph office and sent him a telegram with just one word "Yes" written on it. The telegraph operator looked at it and says, "Why, you can send ten words for the same price as this one" and she says, "No, if I say 'yes' ten times, he'll think I'm too anxious!"

'Artists, Models' Opens at Earle, A Lavish Treat

"ARTISTS AND MODELS." A Paramount revuesical, starring Jack Benny, with Ida Lupino, Richard Arlen and Gail Patrick, specialties by the orchestras of Andre Kostelanetz and Louis Armstrong, Connie Boswell, Martha Raye, Ben Blue, Judy Canova and others. Direction by Raoul Walsh, screen play by Walter DeLeon and Francis Martin. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle.

Jack Benny, long may he wave, is as consistent as the Washington heat and as dependable as a 16-inch gun, whether he be exercising his ability via the microphone, the screen or the living stage. The Jack of Artists and Models," celluloid style, is the same in all the essentials as the Jack of "Earl Carroll's Vanities" and the vaudeville boards of a decade ago—master of timing, wise in the virtues of restraint, dispenser of a brand of comedy whose character the years have left unchanged.

It is this smooth worker who is the star, actually as well as technically, of the Earle's new screen tenant. Ben Blue, Martha Raye, the Yacht Club Boys and Judy Canova bounce in and bounce out every now and then, fulfilling their obligations in a wholly satisfactory manner, but Mr. Benny carries not only the most important comedy burden, but also the principal role in the story.

For "Artists and Models," unlike the stage revue of same name, does have a story. And, truth to tell, we must admit that it has more excuse for existence than 90 per cent of the so-called plots that clutter up the musical screen. In the course of its unraveling, there are many funny moments, as when Gail Patrick proposes marriage to Mr. B.

The star is the balmy head of an otherwise orthodox advertising agency and he is in love with his No. 1 lingerie and hosiery model. He also is chairman of the forthcoming Artists and Models Ball, of which he would make his girl friend queen.

Judy Canova a "Find."

An important client, who must not be crossed because he has given Jack a $1,000,000 contract, insists that the queen must be a blueblood rather than a professional model. Unbeknownst to his financial "angel," the latter's girl friend is selected for the honor by Chairman Benny. But the $1,000,000 account complicates matters by choosing the model, who has taken a ritzy-sounding alias and affected a Park avenue manner in order to gain the beauty throne.

Eventually, Jack decides he loves the real blueblood (Gail Patrick) and his sponsor (Richard Arlen) gets the model (Ida Lupino). These four work out the story, supported by Hedda Hopper, Donald Meek, and Cecil Cunningham.

Ben Blue has no dance routine as funny as the minuet number he did with Burns and Allen in "College Holiday," which also starred Benny, but his voice and mannerisms elicited much laughter at the second show yesterday.

Judy Canova, radio luminary, and who was seen on the Earle stage not so long ago, seems to be a valuable screen find. Singing "Pop! Goes the Bubble" in a bathtub and "Stop! You're Breaking My Heart," with Ben Blue as her foil, she provides some of the liveliest moments in "Artists and Models."

Several Good Tunes.

Connie Boswell, Andre Kostelanetz's orchestra and a pair of lovely, but unidentified, lady swimmers, give us the "class" production number, "Whispers in the Dark." Martha Raye sings and struts to the rhythm of Louis Armstrong's music in a humorous, jazzy Harlem spectacle called "Public Melody No. 1."

For novelty there are Russell Patterson's "Personettes," admirably conceived and splendidly executed in its entirety, and a glimpse of six of the country's better known artists and illustrators—Peter Arno, McClelland Barclay, Arthur William Brown, Rube Goldberg, John LaGatta and Mr. Patterson—at their easels. Sandra Storm, "England's most famous model," appears briefly in this scene, looking impossibly beautiful and quite fragile.

There are several catchy song hits, of which our favorites are "Whispers in the Dark" and "Stop! You're Breaking My Heart." Harold Arlen, composer of "Stormy Weather," was one of the six tunesmiths engaged for "Artists and Models," the others being Ted Koehler, Victor Young, Burton Lane, Frederick Hollander and Leo Robin.

With all that—Benny in top form, a wealth of good comedy of many species, songs that you can whistle as you leave the theater, eye-filling spectacle and a story that gets into no one's hair—a top-notch picture is inevitable. A movie's first duty is to entertain, and "Artists and Models" does that with a vengeance.

Stage Bill Pleases.

The Earle's stage presentation this week is comparably good. Hal Le Roy, filling the headline spot, proves that he is still the ingenious and technically adept tap dancer that Washington has come to know from previous appearances on local boards.

Ed Ford and his dog Whitey are a welcome act which will please the young and old. Jack Starnes and company offer adagio dances in which the girl, Ann Anavan, and two of her partners wear fluorescent—if that's the word—costumes, and a third partner—but that would be telling. The Four Robeys open the vaudeville with an act that demonstrates their versatility as acrobats, equilibrists, gadget balancers and whatnot.

About The Show Shops

'Broadway Melody of 1938,' Palace Feature, Is Good, Gay and Tuneful

Miss Powell's Dancing, Bright Score, Comics Are Blended in Success.

By Gerald G. Gross

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

"BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer revue, starring Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell, with George Murphy, Sophie Tucker, Judy Garland, Buddy Ebsen, Willie Howard and a large cast of players and specialty artists. Screen play by Jack McGowan, from original story by Sid Silvers and Jack McGowan. Music and lyrics by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Previewed August 16. At Loew's Palace.

If there ever was a sure thing, "Broadway Melody of 1938" is it. Just as certainly as you know Stargazer will win that Belmont steeplechase and bring 25 grand and happiness to Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell, this latest edition of M-G-M's "Melody" series is bound to win the favor of the majority who witness it.

Happily, the producers elected to subordinate Robert Taylor—though he never appeared more beautiful—and the story in which he carries the male lead to the superb tomfooleries of Buddy Ebsen, Sophie Tucker, Billy Gilbert, Willie Howard and Raymond Walburn, to the rich voice of Judy Garland, Miss Tucker's welcome vocal reminiscences and, last but far from least, to the magical tapping of Miss Powell.

The talents represented in this elaborate harbinger of Leo's 1937-38 movie season are as variegated as they are uniformly excellent, yet the whole make a blend of eye-and-ear entertainment that is smooth, harmonious and mighty easy to take. Possibly the greatest compliment that could be paid "Melody" is that the whole is as great as its parts—if not greater.

Film Not Flawless.

This we believe to be so, even though Miss Powell was no less delightful and her routines just as exciting in "Born to Dance" and "Broadway Melody of 1936" even though the "I'm Feeling Like a Million" dance number by Miss Powell and George Murphy is much too much like the brilliant "Isn't It a Lovely Day" sequence in "Top Hat."

Yes, granted that the tune of "Everybody Sing" is just "Singing in the Rain" all over again (after all, who among us, not to mention Composers Brown and Freed, will forget that precious song number from the first "Melody" as crooned by Cliff Edwards?) and that the farcical steeplechase at Belmont is not only unfunny, but a repetition of a part of "A Day at the Races," and that Robert Benchley's comic gifts are mostly wasted in a straight role—granted all that, "Broadway Meloday of 1938" is still one of the greatest musical productions ever to come out of Hollywood.

Why? Well, the easiest way to answer that question is to tell you, "Go see for yourself." While, as we have indicated before, Judy Garland's rendition of "You Made Me Love You" in itself is worth the ticket fee, it cannot be said that she carries the picture.

Not Much Story.

Nor should all the credit go to Sophie Tucker, even if her acting—yes, her acting—and her inspired performance in the "Your Broadway and My Broadway" number pack a Dempsey punch, vintage 1919. Nor Buddy Ebsen, whose hoofing and jesting were never better; or Willie Howard, whose only crime is that he is not seen and heard long or often enough; or Raymond Walburn, Charles Igor Gorin, Robert Wildhack or Helen Troy, all of whom have something swell to offer and do it.

Although "Melody" pretends to have a story, something about a girl who has two loves—a horse and Robert Taylor—and who finally wins the top spot in his (Taylor's) revue, the picture is primarily a very, very much glorified vaudeville bill whose respective stars could never have been rounded up for the stage, not even New York's Palace of yesteryear.

So forget the "plot" and, resolving to enjoy rib-tickling comedy, well nigh unbeatable tap dancing, good music and above-par ensemble numbers, find a place in the Palace line and have that resolution fulfilled.

Trans-Lux

Everything from President Roosevelt assailing the "economic royalists" to oysters growing on trees in the Florida everglades flashes its way across the Trans-Lux screen on the new program.

Two wars, the Spanish and the Sino-Japanese conflicts, share the news spotlight, while the Russians provide homes for Spanish youths who lost their families in the peninsula campaigns.

You have just about everything on this line-up with a great deal that is of national interest; the United States setting a new pace in airplanes, a record tobacco crop, the irrigation of the famous Dust Bowl, the construction of the Golden Gate Exposition, the opening of football training, a Negro baptism, the Texas Rangers giving the New Englanders a new thrill, Franciscan friars at Graymoor, N. Y., taking the vows and having their pates shaved, and a half hundred good old American Indians fighting it for canoe race honors.

Roland Robbins has one of those "Stranger Than Fiction" short subjects on his bill that presents among other oddities a blind newsboy who "feels" his way around the town to deliver papers and does an amazing job of it; as well as someinteresting shots of a "bird boarding school," where they teach 'em to sing.

A color short in cartoon rhythm, "Spring Festival" and "Jungle Playmates," a study in nature in the rough, vie with the summer sports shots for action and distinction. The sports line-up runs the gamut—rodeo tumbles, skiing on sand dunes, yachting, Lenore K. Wingard taking the $1,000 swim top money, the soap box derby at Akron, and lingerie fashions, but this last is getting into fall and big money.

"Bamboo," one of those off-the-track travel shorts is unusual for the kind of architecture it presents, with framework that resembles the outlines of a steel skyscraper; the Javanese do that sort of thing with a precision and skill that dazzle the eye. And it is a far-cry back to middies doing the "Big Apple," the dance craze of the moment, or the Canadian who calls the roll of his family of 21 and never misses a name.

A Little Girl and Her Hero

Victor McLaglen, as Sergt. MacDuff, teaches Shirley Temple, as Wee Willie Winkie, the manly art of self-defense and the soldier's manual of arms in the stirring picturization of Kipling's story which opened yesterday at the Capitol.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 20.—Scarcely a month passes without some studio breaking out the banners to announce the arrival of a "sensational" new European star. The fan magazine sob sisters write drooling rhapsodies about the "charming sophisticate who kissed my hand when we were introduced." The scenario writers wearily revamp stories to suit his "appealing" accent. The publicity men wearily drag out the old bromides about his "aristocratic" background. Finally he makes a picture and—nine times out of ten—catches the next boat home—leaving behind him a sadder, but never a wiser, producer.

MARLENE DIETRICH.

When will these mighty moguls of the movies realize the American audiences do not like foreign accents, and that European stars, no matter how skilled, have no conception of the American sense of humor and drama? Excepting the English, who share our racial characteristics.. how many Europeans have been popular stars in America? Exactly five—Valentino, Banky, Chevalier, Garbo and Dietrich! The others—and there have been hundreds of them—have just been splashes of red ink on the leaders of Hollywood. Pola Negri made several pictures, but no profit for Paramount. Emil Jannings, a great actor, didn't last long enough to justify the million invested in him. Simone Simon—but why bring up a subject so painful to Darryl Zanuck?

The only stars who are lasting gold mines to the studios are the ones who are created by popular demand. The Gables, Taylors, Shearers, Dresslers and Crosbys who rise from small roles to star billing because Mr. and Mrs. America express interest in them. The comers who will some day replace them are right here in Hollywood, not in Europe.

Visited the set where 14-year-old Deanna Durbin is working in a new musical and was both amused and impressed by the applied psychology of her director, Henry Koster. Deanna's enunciation in one scene was noticeably "mushy" and Koster asked what on earth was the matter. "I'm chewing licorice—I love it!" she stated definately. "Well," Miss Durbin, you can't talk and eat candy at the same time—spit it out!" Koster ordered. But Deanna, usually the best-behaved of children, shook her head stubbornly and refused. I expected to see the director "blow up." Instead, he turned calmly to the head electrician, instructed him to "kill" the lights and said, sarcastically "now, let's all relax while we wait for the great diva to finish her lolly-pop."

Had lunch with May Robson, who told me story after story about her life-long friendship with Marie Dressler. "Marie," she said, "would never accept a 'thank you' for the good deeds that she showered about her. Several years ago, after 42 years on the stage, I began to have difficulty in finding work and I told Marie that I had decided to retire. She called me an old ninny and told me that I should try the talkies. She battered down my objections, bull-dozed Louis B. Mayer into seeing me, and bull-dozed me into a contract. I had been ready to give up and vegetate—she gave me a new lease on life. But when I tried to thank her, she put on the gruffest expression.

"Don't be a damned old fool!" she snorted. "I had nothing to do with it. If they hadn't believed in you they wouldn't have looked you up and offered you a contract, would they!"

Joan Crawford's Saturday night dinners are a Hollywood institution. Only her most intimate friends are invited, formality is chucked out of the window, and the guests sit around the long dining table for hours, arguing furiously about every subject under the sun, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Astaire, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Cooper, Jean Muir, Jerry Asher, Phil Huston, and Mr. and Mrs. George Murphy are "regulars"—the nucleus of the Crawford-Tone clique. If you still cherish any rosy ideas about Hollywood's "wild parties," it may interest you to know that the ladies all bring their knitting. Just now they are making pink blankets and things for the Coopers' expected heir.

"Borneo," picturization of Martin Johnson's last trip, is a fitting climax of his interesting career of seeking adventure in far places. "The Isle of the Inconceivable" reveals itself to be worthy of such nomenclature, for here Nature indulges in some of her wildest, most playful pranks.

Johnson was able to film fabulous flying monkeys, tree-climbing fish, oysters growing on trees, and bacchanalia among the head-hunters, along with such run-of-the-mill stuff as exotic birds, tropical trees and grinning natives.

If this film is notable for anything, it is for the humor which flashes out occasionally, such as the drunken revelling of two aged gentlemen of the interior who imbibe too freely of the local giggle-water. Lowell Thomas, as narrator, is guilty of several bad puns, but when he is teamed with the alleged scientific professor, Lew Lehr, there is hilarity.

Photographed on excellent sepia film, the pictorial quality of the travelogue is above par. There is little aerial shooting, for the density of the Borneo jungles prevented it. From a native-constructed raft, and from a queer sort of dugout most of the shots are made.

There are bits of particular interest, such as the flash of flying snakes, the visit of the Chinese dentist, Mrs. Johnson drinking from a water vine, birds' nests being removed from a dank cavern, and shots of the home life of the proboscis monkey.

This latter animal is fascinating in the same way as is Jimmy Durante, for it has a nose of extraordinary length. Reputedly, this is the first time this particular species of monkey has been filmed by motion picture camera.

While you will no doubt say, along with Lowell Thomas, that Borneo is a tall tale come true, you may wish "Borneo" had been only two reels long. Unquestionably, it would then have been more interesting.

Harman-Ising's technicolor cartoon, "The Wayward Pups," concerns the adventures of two small dogs who have a tom-cat guardian. "Newsboy's Nocturne," the comedy short, is notable for nothing but the manner in which it wastes much vivid young talent on a mediocre hodge-podge story. Which remark excludes the brief appearance of that demon drummer, Jack Powell, who covers an entire room quick as a wink with his tricky drumsticks.

SALLY STROUD.

Lucky for Horses.

Consideration for horses is keeping Victor McLaglen, giant 20th Century-Fox star, from taking up polo, which has become a weekly feature at his Los Angeles sports stadium. McLaglen, in perfect condition, weighs 235 pounds.

Plays for Fun.

Shirley Temple, 'Going Native' Click at Capitol

Kipling Tale Is Brought to Screen; Local Actors Win Applause.

"WEE WILLIE WINKIE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Rudyard Kipling's story of the same name, starring Shirley Temple and Victor McLaglen, with C. Aubrey Smith, June Lang, Michael Whalen and Cesar Romero. Directed by John Ford, screen play by Ernest Pascal and Julien Josephson. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At the Capitol.

With scores of ambitious Washington youngsters trying out their wings, toes and voices in "Going Native," and with Shirley Temple definitely stepping from the baby to the little girl actress class in "Wee Willie Winkie," both the Capitol Theater stage and screen are alive with the thrill of developing talent.

The small Temple wears Highlander uniform dashingly in "Wee Willie Winkie." She's cute and sassy, she sings "Auld Lang Syne" simply and touchingly. But she is definitely a new Shirley, with a different kind of poise, not the bouncing little lass of a few seasons ago. "Wee Willie Winkie" makes heavy dramatic demands upon her and she fills them nobly, but it does not give her a chance to do any of those gay little song-and-dance numbers in which she is at her best. Director John Ford should really have given Shirley a fling at doing a Highland fling and a bit of broad Scotch dialect singing in that snappy skit of hers.

This last thought involves no sacrilege on a Kipling story, for the screen "Wee Willie Winkie" outside of being laid in India, has hardly a flavor of Kipling. Rather, in its hard-riding Britishers, night raids by devilish tribesmen and general soldierly swing, it belongs in the film category of "Lives of a Bengal Lancer."

In Supporting Cast.

Shirley plays a little American girl, who with her widowed mother, goes to live with her paternal grandfather, commanding officer of a British outpost. After a skirmish in which her best friend, Sergt. MacDuff (Victor McLaglen) is killed, Shirley decides there should be no more fighting and runs off to see the tribal chief about peace terms. When grandfather and his soldiers come to get Shirley back from the Khan, she brings them together and a peaceful understanding is reached, thus putting Shirley considerably up on the League of Nations.

June Lang, playing Shirley's mother, is very lovely and does all that can be done with some remarkably ineffective dialogue. Michael Whalen, as the British subaltern who falls in love with the young widow, has a role on a par with Miss Lang's.

Victor McLaglen, playing Sergt. McDuff, has another typical McLaglen part, this time sweetened with oodles of comedy with Shirley.

That excellent patriarch of the pictures, C. Aubrey Smith, plays splendidly as the old colonel who is Shirley's grandfather. But out of the whole cast outside of the star, we must confess a preference for Cesar Romero as that polished knave, Khoda Khan, and Willie Fung as the greasy rascal, Mohammet Dihn. They give the proper pepper of villainy essential to an adventure movie.

"Going Native" Clicks.

"Going Native" in its 1937 manifestation, offers plenty of material for a talent scout. The big revue, smartly dressed and well staged, maintains a high level of entertainment all the way, but, of course, has some special peaks.

Among the topsiest of the topnotches are that smooth lad, Dick Leslie, a really remarkable impersonator; Joe and Earline King blending ventriloquism and excellent singing; Soprano Hallie Mae Reed; the current "Miss Washington," Helen Greene, who can warble a wicked "Dinah," and Lee O'Neill. There is also the colored entertainer of "The Washboard Blues" group who does practically impossible things with a washboard.

The chorus is large, lovely and well trained. Just as important is a fine singing chorus, the George Washington University Vocal Ensemble, under the direction of Dr. Robert Harmon.

Other clever young Washingtonians who present specialties are Dancers Lee and Cody O'Neill, Minstrel Ward Duval, Dancer Rae Russell, Tenor Edgar Tally and Dancer Vera Miller.

New York, Aug. 20.

BERT ACOSTA: Capt. Eddie Schneider, who held the junior transcontinental flying record, and who flew with you for the Spanish loyalists, has been refused a passport by the State Department. SENATOR ROYAL S. COPELAND: Your running-mate, Frank Prial, was offered the nomination for comptroller by Mayor LaGuardia three months ago, but Prial rejected it, because he thought he'd have no chance that way. And now Prial has a primary battle on his hands, and even if he wins this, he'll probably be licked in the election . . .

"THE GREAT GAMBINI." Paramount's picturization of a story by Frederick Jackson, adapted to the screen by the author and Frank Porter. Featuring Akim Tamiroff, Marian Marsh, John Trent, Genevieve Tobin and Reginald Denny. Directed by Charles Vidor. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

This picture has the virtue of two good performances, several laughs and nothing else. It is, moreover, sadly burdened by the presence of a Mr. John Trent, who once flew a plane. Please somebody get a plane for John and let him fly off in it, lifting it much more lightly from the ground than he does his dialogue.

The plot? Well:—The night before their wedding, Ann Randolph and her fiance, Steve Dabney, go night-clubbing and are entertained by the Great Gambini, a mind-reader. In answer to a question asked by Ann, he replies that the wedding will never take place. He's quite right, for the next morning Mr. Dabney has met a fate worse, says the comic detective, than marriage. Stretched out cold and stiff with the bullet of a .38 (or was it a .32?) through his heart, he is the cause of great inconvenience to a number of suspects. Then the Great Gambini reappears as a sort of super-sleuth.

At one point you are given one minute—no more, no less—to pick the villain. It isn't long enough because the picture cheerfully cheats and doesn't drop a single legitimate clew. If we could feel deeply about this we might picket the Met with placards reading, "Unfair to would-be mystery-solvers," but there's really nothing to stir us into action (not in this weather). Of course, if you just want to guess without benefit of clews, you'll probably guess right.

The two good performances are turned in by Akim Tamiroff as Gambini, smooth and silky, and Genevieve Tobin, out Alice-Bradying Alice and out Billie-Burking Billie. In other words, she flutters and chatters, and amusingly.

Among others present are Marian Marsh, after all these years; Reginald Denny, and that Mr. Trent.

Four short subjects are at least two too many to complete the bill. The quartet includes an interesting but inexpert reel, "The Killer of the Tontos," all about mountain lions in Arizona; a Popeye cartoon, Donald Novis, still sweet-voiced but boring in "Cut Out for Love," and an excellent newsreel.

Late Bird.

Don Ameche, 20th Century-Fox star, reads or visits or listens to the radio until 1 or 2 o'clock every morning.

Columbia

Romance, blood curdling action and spectacle are combined in "Slave Ship," opening a return engagement at the Columbia, to form a fast moving melodrama which is practically "must" for all who crave excitement on the screen.

Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery, Mickey Rooney and Elizabeth Allan have the chief roles in this fictionized insight into the slave trade of the nineteenth century. All four acquit themselves nobly, with young Rooney being especially good.

Strong on plot, "Slave Ship" tells of the skipper of a sailing vessel trafficking in poor black devils who tries to get out of his nefarious business when he falls in love. His sailors, however, are quite satisfied to remain in the lucrative trade and the trouble they make for their captain comprises the substance of the picture.
